SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

WHEN MIXED WITH SULPHUR IT BRINGS BACK ITS BEAUTIFUL LUSTRE AT ONCE

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur Compound restores its appearance a hundred-fold. Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored, and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

MEXICO—UNPREPAREDNESS DRIVEN HOME

THE Mexican situation, like the European war, has served a useful purpose in showing not only the extent of our unpreparedness, but also the disorganization under which we as a nation conduct our affairs.

One phase affecting the homes of this nation—our real source of preparedness—is typical.

National guardsmen were called into active service in Texas late in June. The event has been expected for some time. Men were called to the front, leaving dependent families in critical conditions. Tales of suffering and hardship found their way to the front and into print. No pay was forthcoming until early in August. The troops were not in action, and answering a questioning public opinion, an order was issued permitting men with dependent families to apply for discharges. No thought was given to the effect of this order upon the army discipline or organization, no provision made for filling the ranks, no machinery provided to prove that families were dependent, no provisions made for payment of transportation home.

Men who have answered their country's call have left families at home without income, protection or care. The government has assumed, if it has thought at all, that the employer would carry the load. Some have generously done so—but others have not and could not. Men do not find it easy to serve loyally and efficiently with hungry, sick babies at home; with mothers absent from little children earning their living; with wives about to face maternity alone; with mothers taking boarders into their home life to eke out an existence; with insurance policies lapsing. Guardsmen who are real men do not sleep soundly at night and awake with clear eyes and eager hearts if they are haunted by the fear that their families have been evicted for unpaid rent. They look forward darkly to a future burdened with debts and unemployment.

This Mexico has taught us: that America cares nothing for her soldiers in peace, or for the basic conditions that make for able, willing defenders. All the seamen's laws and child labor and compensation bills that congress may pass in its effort to win votes will not blind us to the fact that the democratic administration has no policy or program of preparedness which will safeguard American homes in peace or war. A bill to safeguard child workers must stand with a program to conserve the child life in the families of men at the front or we shall fall utterly when the test of national loyalty and efficiency comes.

WAR GAME WILL BEGIN TOMORROW

ATLANTIC FLEET WILL ATTACK AND ATTEMPT TO MAKE LANDING WITH THEORETICAL ARMY OF INVASION

United Press Service NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 19.—Hasty preparations were being completed by the Atlantic reserve fleet today for the defence of the coast line against an enemy attack tomorrow. Battleships, destroyers, mine layers, submarines and fleet trains are at their posts and set to repel the invasion.

At the first peep of Sunday morning's dawn the Atlantic fleet will attack and attempt to effect a landing with its theoretical army of invasion. It will be the first of this year's war games, worked out by the war college. The problem is: The reserve fleet, in command of Rear Admiral J. M. Helm, with the destroyer flotilla, will defend the approach to the vital parts of the coast from an attack by the present Atlantic fleet, with the submarines as auxiliaries. Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight will act as umpire on the new superdreadnought Pennsylvania. Particular stress will be laid upon the value of the battle cruisers as an attacking force against a slower but heavier armored defending squadron. The radius of action will be about that of last year's.

Says War Will End 1917, Germany Has Mento Win

By WILBUR S. FORREST. (United Press Staff Correspondent.)

BRITISH BASE HOSPITAL, NORTHERN FRANCE, July 21.—"The war will end early in 1917. Which side will win? Germany will win, of course."

A wounded officer of the noted Prussian Guard made this assertion to the United Press today. The words came between big bites of thick white bread laid sandwich-like over a heavy spread of real butter and orange marmalade. The officer was hungry. With about 200 comrades he had just arrived from the scene of the big British offensive. He had been nipped in the leg by shrapnel. His wound did not deter him from verbal optimism. But he was greatly thankful for the neat hospital cot and the treatment he was receiving.

"Why were you taken prisoner?" he was asked. "The British had too much artillery for us," was the reply. "Their fire was stronger than ours and we were cut off. We had plenty of food but no water. We had to surrender." This officer spoke excellent English. He learned it in a German school. He was under thirty, and a perfect specimen of manhood.

"How long have you been at the front?" he was asked. "Twenty two months," he replied with pride. "I've been in Poland, Galicia, Champagne, Verdun and at Contalmaison and Mametzwood. I was captured at Mametzwood. For five days my division was cut off by the British artillery fire. A trip to the rear for water was death. Long range guns were playing streams of steel on the lines between us and the rear. Shorter range guns were doing the same in front. At night we could crawl to shell holes and drink the water gathered there, but it was very risky and the water did not last."

Despite his wound and the fact he was a prisoner, the Prussian could conceal an air of "cockiness." "Germany will win the war," he added in his slow, careful English. "We have the men, the guns and the material. But I think it will last one year."

"What about the food situation in Germany?" "Food is very short now, but there is enough to last until the harvest. Then we will have plenty. We are not worried."

Discussion of the possible duration of the war led the wounded German to a denunciation of the United States. "You Americans are responsible for the long war that Germany is having," he said. "The war would have been over in a year if you Americans had not sold munitions to England."

"But Germany might have bought munitions from America as well as England. Perhaps the British fleet was partly to blame."

"Yes," was the response, "but we blame the United States more." Neither the Prussian officer nor his comrades had heard about the exploit of the German submarine, Deutschland. The details interested them intensely.

Private Gerhard— of Prussian Guard regiment No. —, was just as confident as his officer about the outcome of the war, but unlike the officer, he was willing to give hearty praise to the fighting British "Tom-mies."
