Mrs. Brown tells her grocer:
"Please send me some tea—black tea."

And he does!

But Mrs. Brown, perhaps, doesn't realize that there are two distinct types of black tea: English Breakfast and Ceylon. And that she might like one better than the other. The way to choose tea is by taste. If you will send ten cents, we'll mail you the Taste Packet—the simplest, surest way to know good tea.

The Taste Packet contains four parchment envelopes of Schilling's Tea—Japan, English Breakfast, Ceylon and Oolong—enough to make five or six cups of each taste. Address: A Schilling & Company, 333 Second Street, San Francisco.

Claimed England Saved the U.S. Cotton Industry

United Press Service

LONDON, Aug. 3.—(By mail)—That the British government decided not to let American cotton to go below $12 cents a pound to planters; that it prepared to spend $250,000,000 to prevent a possible cotton panic in this country and that it sent agents to the United States to buy cotton in unlimited quantities to keep the prices as normal as possible; and also that these agents are still in the United States, are facts given to the United Press today.

The British government, when it decided in 1915 to make cotton contraband, realized that might cause a panic in this country. Felix Rose, who directed the British plan to prevent this, told today how he did it.

"We had to declare cotton contraband," said he, "but we wanted to protect the cotton planters. We know the speculators would make capital of the order in council and drive cotton prices to ruinous depths."

"So the British government decided to go into the market as a buyer. I looked over the market and decided we should be ready to buy five million bales; and we had to have $250,000,000 at our disposal constantly."

"We thought the planter should not get less than 8 1/2 cents, so we sent agents to the United States with unlimited authority to buy. That was in July of 1915. We told the American government of our plan. On August 18th the king signed the order in council declaring cotton contraband.

"No panic followed. What we had done was not generally known and the strength of cotton in the open market must have been a mystery to the speculators. In the first week cotton went up a cent. Within a month it was up 3 1/2 cents. So the planters received $60,000,000 more for the crop that year than they would have received in normal times."

"Is the British government ready to follow with the same action for the 1916 crop?" was asked.

"It looks as if the 1916 crop would be able to sell itself without British aid," said Rose. Rose, an English subject, has been in the cotton business all his life. He added in conclusion that every bale of cotton that has been seized by the British has been paid for and no shipper has lost money except possibly on cotton for which he would have received an exorbitant profit if he had gotten it to Germany. Instead of its being seized by the British. Every bale seized, he said, has been sold to spinners in England and not a single bale remains in storage.

U.S. May Give Vocational Courses in High Schools

United Press Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Uncle Sam will put a vocational course of training in every high school in the country if a bill that has just passed the senate also passes the house of representatives. Indications today are that the bill will become a law soon.

The bill was introduced simultaneously in both houses by Senator Hoke Smith and Representative Hughes, both of Georgia. It is an elaboration of the federal aid system by which the United States government annually contributes nearly $100,000 to each state for the maintenance of agricultural colleges and experiment stations, as well as four million, one hundred thousand dollars to carry on the rural extension system of vocational instruction for farmers throughout the country.

The proposed law is the result of a steadily growing conviction that the prospective farmer, or, nowadays, the scientific agriculturist, should be extended the opportunities of an agricultural schooling at an early age and not be compelled to attend the agricultural college for the rudiments of his trade.

It has been felt that a large proportion of boys destined to make their living from the soil are unable to afford a college education and need high school credits for college entrance anyhow.

Eighteen states now extend aid to their high schools for courses in agriculture, the mechanic arts and home economics. Minnesota annually appropriates $300,000 for this work.

To standardize and nationalize the high school aid work the Smith-Hughes bill provides that the United States shall share in the payment of salaries to state teachers, inspectors and directors in state high schools. It also provides for the federal board of vocational education.

This board, which would consist of the Commissioner of Education of the United States as chairman and four members to be appointed, (not more than two from any political party), by the president. This board and state authorities would co-operate in outlining courses.

The states relation service of the department of agriculture has pursued the system still further by preparing a comprehensive system of courses in agriculture. These have been offered to the states for use in their grammar schools, in the rural districts.

Alabama, Mississippi, Wisconsin, Maryland and Vermont have installed the course in all their elemental institutions of learning since the initiation of the plan a year or so ago.

NO WAR ORDERS CLOSE FACTORIES

UNEMPLOYMENT IS INCREASING IN URUGUAY BECAUSE BELLIGERENTS DON'T WANT MORE MEAT

United Press Service

MONTEVIDEO, Aug. 23.—Lack of war orders for frozen meats has caused the closing of Frigorifico Uruguayo, or Uruguayan Meat Freezing Plant in the district of Cerro and the consequent throwing of 2,000 men out of employment.

Unemployment is rapidly reaching a critical stage in the district, as the number of unemployed has doubled several times by the closing of allied industries. More men are being completely thrown out of work daily. It is said much suffering has resulted.

Stock farmers in the interior have also suffered big slumps in the prices paid for their product. The belligerents in Europe do not want any more of these meats right now and there are no ships for the plant's production to be shipped elsewhere.
