Moving Pictures

There are many forms of moral honor, and every woman has her own individual code of ethics to govern various situations. The code of Marcia Gray, the basis for the photoplay which will be presented at the Star tonight, will win ready sympathy. Suddenly deprived of refinement and luxury by the cowardice of her husband at a crucial moment, she finds but one solace—Orlando Castle, her former sweetheart and friend of her husband. Marcia's code met a great and unexpected test, not from the usual triangle of two men and a woman, but in what makes one of the strong, human moments in a charming production. The wonderful personality of Constance Collier as Marcia Gray makes her part one of universal appeal. Every woman will find in the crisis in Marcia Gray's life a marvelously exact duplication of what she would have to do, and experience should she meet the same problem. The incidents of the story could happen in any home to any one. The cast is excellent. Each character forms a strong, vital necessary part of the whole. "The Code of Marcia Gray" will be presented at the Star theater tonight only. Saturday Nance O'Neill will be seen in "The Flames of Johannesburg."

Jealous Woman and Her Victim

Joseph C. Graveur, owner of a New York city garage, was shot to death in the Hotel Walton, Philadelphia, by Mrs. Harry Belzer of Brooklyn, who then committed suicide. He had gone there with Mrs. Joseph C. Leduc of Chicago. Mrs. Belzer, with whom he had been friendly, was insanely jealous. While she killed Graveur, the Chicago woman was not mortally wounded.

Willard Says He Wants to Fight Somebody Now

By HAMILTON

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Jess Willard, having spent the summer showing what a great cowboy he is, has announced that he wants some one to offer him another fortune for his services as heavyweight champion. He wants to fight. That is, he says he wants to fight, and, as Tom Jones also says Willard wants to engage in fist-fights for the benefit of the public which has been deprived of Willard's presence since he wallowed all the aspiration out of Frank Moran, it must be admitted the statement carries some weight.

Willard made his rash statement on the far-off Pacific Coast, and the well-known Jones admitted he had been deluged with an offer of $40,000 for Willard's services. The offer, he said, came from a syndicate at Everett, Wash. Jones didn't make known the name of the boxer Willard prefers to meet in his second bout since he wrested the crown from the kingly looks of Jack Johnson. But just the same, it's an even bet he didn't mention the name of Jack Dillon.

Matching Willard with a fighter who has a chance of nicking off the heavyweight crown is more than an every day task. The fighters in the United States, the only place where there are any fighters to speak of, are a sorry lot. Of the whole bunch there is scarcely one who can claim he has a right to challenge Willard.

Little Jack Dillon appears to be the logical opponent for the big Westerner, but Jack's size is against him. He has whipped nearly every heavyweight who claimed a chance with the towering champion, but when promoters are sounded on the possibility of a match between Willard and Dillon they shy. Dillon is so small he would have little opportunity of finding a vulnerable spot in the huge champion. The match would be laughable from that standpoint. Yet, Dillon's record shows he has whipped some mighty big men, and none can say he wouldn't have at least a chance at the crown.

Eliminating Dillon, there isn't a man who stands out as a possible conqueror of Willard. Fred Fulton has the size, and he's been fighting well, but that doesn't prove he's in Willard's class. His record isn't long enough. Efforts have been made to bring Fulton and Willard together, and at one time it appeared likely the match would be made, but it fell through. In spite of the fact that Fulton has only a slight claim to a match, it is probable he will get first call. But at the same time there is no reason to believe Willard, fat as he must be, will get into action before January 1.

Ham Picks Red Sox to Win Over the Dodgers

By H. C. HAMILTON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Triumphant after their smashing drives down the stretch of the pennant races in the two major leagues, the Boston Red Sox and the Brooklyn Dodgers are resting today, taking a final breath before the opening game of the world series tomorrow in Boston.

Tearing their way up through every obstacle, fighting off attack after attack, holding up their heads when it seemed that victory could not be won, these teams have proved their nerve, their unflinching hearts. They go into what promises to be one of the most interesting series ever played between clubs of the American and National leagues after the tightest race since the never-to-be-forgotten finish of 1903, when the Cubs and Giants fought down to the last day.

The driving finish, the bitter clashes with rival teams the nerve-racking, heart-breaking strain of holding a lead by a margin of a few points, all have been surmounted by these two premier baseball clubs. They will go into the series with the admiration and interest of a nation behind them. Wherever there are baseball fans there will be eager watching for the returns of the crowning event of the season.

The Red Sox, champions from last year, when they pounded out four victories in five games over the Phillies, will go into the series favored to win. Man for man, the team representing the American league stands out as a better organization than its National League rival. This year will see no change from last in that interest will center in the pitching staffs of the two clubs.

The Dodgers have a powerful attack. The Red Sox have a wonderful defense, backed by a pitching staff that has pulled the club to the top of the big league every time when it seemed they might falter.

It is hard to make a comparison of the pitching staffs, for American League pitching has been conceded to be stronger than the National brand for several years. Also it is held that American League pitchers have to face heavier batters than their brothers in the Tanager circuit. In the past American League hurlers have borne up well under heavy assaults from the older organization, and it seems reasonable to believe they will do so this year.

The Brooklyn hurlers have done remarkably well. They have had a powerful scoring machine to help them out but there have been times, as there are in the life of every baseball club, where the issue depended upon light pitching—and they rose to the occasion.

It will be up to Shore, Ruth, Leonard, Foster and Mays to hold down the slugging bats of such walllopers as Casey, Stengel, Jake Daubert and Zack Wheat, not to speak of Chief Myers and some of the smaller tribe who are not considered as top-notch-ers by National League hurlers in any sense of the word.

Against Marquard, Pfefferli Combs, Smith and Cheney the Red Sox hitters—all hold their batting averages are not so imposing as those of their National League rivals—are expected to manufacture enough records to win a majority of the games. With in infield defense second to none, the Red Sox probably will with the aid of their classy pitching staff, hold Dodger scoring to a minimum.

In the catching department, the Red Sox have the edge. In Agnew, Cady Carrigan and Thomas, they have four excellent receivers. Cady probably will get to do all the big series work unless Carrigan himself elects to take a hand. Brooklyn must depend upon Chief Myers and Otto Miller, neither of whom compares favorably with the Boston wind-paddlers. Meyers is slow, and so is Miller. Both are good hitters, but very slow on the bases. Cady, Carrigan and Agnew are dependable hitters, star receivers, and are fast in fielding bunts.

Each of the competing clubs has two first basemen. Merkle and Daubert are the Dodgers doorkeepers, and Hoblitzel and Gainer do the same duties for the Red Sox. In spite of Daubert's fame as a hitting and fielding first baseman, it is doubtful if he has much of an edge on his American League rivals. He is not a hitter of the clean-up type, while both American Leaguers are. Hoblitzel and Gainer, too, are good fielders.

Brighten up the home these cold, snappy evenings with music. The best in records can be heard at Shepherd's, the Record Headquarters, next door to postoffice. 4-11

BABY BEEF

Very few people know the true meaning of Baby Beef. Some may think it is just a young beef. Others may think it is a large veal. This, however, is a mistake.

In order to produce real Baby Beef it is necessary to keep a calf in prime condition from the day it is born until it is weaned; then it is fed with special care so that it keeps on getting fatter as it grows, until it is ready for the market, thus producing the tenderest, sweetest and juiciest meat that can be produced.

That is just what we have to offer for Sunday dinner. If you never ate Baby Beef, try a nice roast or steak, and you will get the most pleasant surprise of your life.

We also have a full line of Prime Beef, Mutton, Spring Lamb, Young Pig and Pork, and all kinds of Chicken, Ham, Breakfast Bacon, Home-Made Sausage. "Live and Let Live."

BONDS ARE UP AGAIN

On September 4th Bonds started down, and kept going till they were below sea level. Then they started up again, and came up nicely, higher and higher, every day, till about October 1st, when it was feared they might go down again, but we kept pouring in gasoline, a little oil and plenty of water, and the tin Lizzie puffed and snorted, and threw mud with hind wheels until we reached an altitude of about 4,300 feet, which is dear old Klamath, and the Bond Studio is again open in full blast, to please our customers in the same old way, by making the best pictures in Klamath county.
