COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

BARKENS BEAUTIFULLY AND RESTORES ITS NATURAL COLOR AND LUSTRE AT ONCE

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the sage tea and sulphur essence of home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-made preparation improved by the addition of a few drops of perfume, giving about the desired result, at drug stores, known as "Wyneth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

When gray, faded hair is not styled, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyneth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application of two year hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyneth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

NOT EMBARRASSED

"NOBODY can embarrass me by talking about Americanism," said Mr. Hughes at Green Bay, Wis. "I am not for this one or that one, I am for the United States first, last and all the time, without regard to any other consideration."

This declaration was made in a state where the proportion of foreign born citizens is regarded as large, where there has been thought to be a harsh feeling toward those who do not tincture their patriotism with reservations, and where some timid folk have believed it imprudent to preach what Hughes has always called an "undiluted Americanism."

The response of Wisconsin to Hughes' words has confounded the penny footers, however; and the episode, coupled with that earlier incident in Tennessee, has demonstrated not only that Hughes cannot be embarrassed by the talk about Americanism, but that he cannot be embarrassed by the talk about any issue that may arise in the campaign.

Hughes' freedom from embarrassment is due to his clear convictions and to his undeniable courage in stating them. What he has to say may not meet the opinions of his audience. It did not at Memphis. But his manliness in standing his ground, his readiness to give the reason for the faith that is in him, his logic in presenting his case, compel the attention of thoughtful citizens and win men to his way of thinking.

A man of smaller mental mould than he, a man who was out to win only, might have hesitated to deal with the railroad legislation as Hughes has dealt with it. The cowardly reasoning that led Wilson to surrender to the brotherhoods and that led him to urge surrender upon the democratic congress which he controlled, never penetrated Hughes' indomitable mind. That he wishes the votes of his fellow citizens is undeniable—but that he would truckle to get them or that he would surrender a great principle of legislation or of administration to get them is unthinkable. He is not embarrassed because he is honest.

He Is Center of Fight in the German Reichstag

VON BETHMANN HOLLWEG, CHIEF COUNSEL OF GERMAN EMPIRE

Von Bethmann Hollweg is the center of a fight in the imperial German reichstag, which began on the opening day of this session. He is criticized by one faction, which blames him for diplomatic blunders that brought Rumania in the war against the central powers. He is also opposed by the von Tirpitz party because the German submarine warfare was stopped.

England Preparing Now for Her Demobilization

By HAL O'FLAHERTY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(By mail)—Although peace is not yet in sight, England is already taking steps toward a slow and gradual demobilization of her great army. An inkling of what would happen should any great number of fighting men be suddenly thrown ashore on England's coast has been gleaned from the pranks of restless convalescents. It is stated on good authority that arrangements have been made to house the new army in Northern France for some time after peace has been declared, allowing only small bodies of men to cross the channel at a time.

As the demobilized soldiers cross to England, they will be disposed most systematically. In one of the largest club buildings in London, commandeered for the express purpose, there is being prepared a card index of every soldier, showing his history, qualifications and business training. When the army disbands England expects to know exactly what human resources she possesses, and she is determined to use these toward rebuilding her world trade.

In conjunction with the card indexing of the soldiers, some of the Empire's greatest organizers are making a survey of factories, wholesale houses, shipyards and all businesses requiring labor. The number of men needed for each will be accurately charted, and when the time comes the ex-soldier will be offered immediate employment.

How well England is anticipating the future can only be conjectured, for very few persons know the extent of the plans. But a good indication of how determined the effort is was shown in the commandeering of the National Liberal Club building. The announcement of this act on the part of the government came like a bolt from a clear sky to the club members. They protested indignantly until the president of the club explained the reason; England wanted their premises to care for the future of the men who were facing death in France. The protestors left the building after a patriotic demonstration. The traditions of years were to be thrown overboard to make room for the salvaging of England's trade.

Not only London, but every city of the empire will become a great clearing house for labor. The appalling cost of warfare is to be discussed, in so far as possible, by utilizing fully the virile and revitalized manhood which war produces. If Germany showed greater efficiency in preparing for war, Teutonic ingenuity will be taxed to the limit to outdo the Anglo Saxon in preparing for peace.

Moving Pictures

"The Evil Women Do" is soon to be presented at the Orpheus, with Rupert Julian, who made the production; Elsie Jane Wilson, a new Bluebird star, and Francis Billington, one of the prettiest girls in Bluebird's galaxy of beauties, featured in the leading roles. Emile Gaboriau's famous novel, "The Clique of Gold," forms the basis of the photoplay and its rugged situation, strong in melodramatic possibilities, will afford stirring entertainment, replete with thrills, thrills and sensations.

In "Rags," the great story of a girl's rise from the lowest strata of life to a position of social importance, through which she finds it possible to marry the man she loves, Mary Pickford for whom the story was specially written by the noted novelist, Edith Baranoff Delano, finds a typically effective characterization. This original photoplay is the latest production of the Famous Players Film company on the Paramount program, starring the world beloved "Little Mary," which will be seen at the Star tonight in a return engagement. There is substantial material in "Rags" on which to build one of those great photoplays in which the Famous Players have always succeeded in presenting their most popular star. There is melodrama in some parts of the story, refined by a touch of delicacy inseparable from all Miss Pickford's impersonations. "Little Mary" herself is the crowning glory of the subject, and the manner in which she illustrates her emergence from the sordid world into which her father's drunkenness places her, is worthy the art of a Bernhardt. Tomorrow night Billie Burke will be seen in "Peggy," a Triangle seven reel picture, the same having finished a four weeks' run in the leading theater of Los Angeles.

BILLIE BURKE COMING

Miss Billie Burke, one of the most popular favorites of the American stage, will be presented at the Star Wednesday and Thursday of this week, in the Thomas Ince Triangle film production "Peggy," a seven part comedy drama written especially for Miss Burke. The management desires to recommend this feature as one of the best attractions of the season.

son. When first released this picture ran for four weeks at the Majestic theater in Los Angeles, which is the Coast record, with one exception. The picture is replete with many big scenes, much clever comedy is introduced, incidentally there are a few real thrillers. The fact that it is a Triangle production, supervised by Mr. Ince, with Miss Burke and an excellent cast to bring forth the real merit of the story, is enough to guarantee the high standard with which the production is credited. Of late, it has been the policy of the Star to change program every day, but owing to the demand all over the country for "Peggy," the management has decided to play the feature for two days. There will be no advance in prices. A special musical program will be an added feature.
