This is about how it happens: Bill Williams ambles down to the pub for bis Saturday evening's evening, after a hard week's work and a pretty good supper at home. He is at peace with the world and inclined to keep it. but only on certain terms. Down the bar is Floyd Jenkins. He is a lot like Bill; has worked hard all week. just tucked away a satisfactory supper, and is peaceable on the same conditions.

Bill surrounds a covey of flowing bowls and gives voice to some radical opinions on conscription or politics. Floyd is radical, too, but just the other way. Of course he can't stand by and hear his firmest convictions run into the ground, so he wallops Bill on the nose: Friends intervene, and the belligerents draw on liberal nightcaps before winding their way home.

The same incident has been repeated in perhaps a score of places. Bill doesn't hate Floyd; he pities him in his wrong convictions, and so they are going to battle for a principle. Sunday morning they meet and fight to a knockout-out in the open whatever the weather, with no ropes no gloves and only the grass for their mat
