

Clamor After Almighty Dollar Hurts Baseball

By Hamilton
United Press Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The chase after the almighty dollar and the ultimate end of this chase—the death of the game that lays the golden egg—never had a more forceful bunch of evidence against its practice than in the world's series between Boston and Brooklyn.

Charles H. Ebbets isn't to blame, nor is Joseph Lannin. The fault is with the August National Commission, the supposed protector of organized baseball.

When the races in the American and National leagues reached a critical point early in October, the commission made its plans for the big event, instructing all clubs which had a chance to have tickets printed and prepared them for sale. They fixed a scale of prices which skidded from 50 cents for a bleacher seat in Boston and $1 in Brooklyn to $5 for the best box seats.

There was gnashing of teeth and bitter wailing by the fans, but they having become baseball fans, were determined to see the thing through and they turned out well. There were vacancies in the Brooklyn park, but they did a big business in Boston.

Just the same the wall of the fans is certainly going to be heard. If the National Commission attempts to stage another world's series with such prices in vogue, critics everywhere are confidently predicting the rulers of the game will get the shock of their dignified lives when they count the resultant kale.

It was the mad, dashing blood-struggle for money that put the curse on horse racing, and the same thing almost has done it to boxing. The National Commission is flirting with obscurity when it casts everything but the commercial side of the game to the dogs.

The success of football, the great college sport, run exclusively from a sporting standpoint, is a hint Garry Herrmann, et al., should not overlook.

How to Hurdle With an Artificial Leg Handicap

Whatever else the war has done it has been the cause of a great improvement in the manufacture of artificial limbs. Here is a case in England. This man, a veteran of the Flanders campaign, who lost his leg, is shown jumping over a pole eighteen inches high. That could not be done on artificial legs made before the war.
