FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

DRUGGIST SAYS LADIES ARE USING RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifying darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre, and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of dandruff.

TWO BILLION YET IN FRENCH SOCKS

FRENCH PEASANT'S TREASURE STILL BIG ENOUGH TO GIVE A START IN BUSINESS WHEN PEACE COMES

By GEORGE MARTIN

(United Press Staff Correspondent) NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Nearly half a billion dollars in gold is still tucked away in the French peasant's woolen sock bank today, despite the hundreds of millions he has already poured out of it to help his government win the war.

Maurice Trembley told it proudly. Just arrived in America as the representative of a group of French bankers to help French merchants buy American supplies, the big, smiling Frenchman revealed in the story of how the poor French folks' rainy day fund has fought a big share of the war, and still is big enough to give the French a flying start in business when peace comes.

"No matter how humble the home," said Trembley, "you may know, though you could not find it in a day's search, that somewhere in it a woolen sock containing gold is buried. It is the French peasant's pride, that sock."

"The remaining two billion francs gold will stay buried unless the worst comes to the worst. If the old men and women thought it was needed to win the war, they would dig it up in a minute."

"Just before I sailed I saw a needlessly worried old French peasant and his wife, very poorly clad, and none too well cared for in any respect, bring what remained of their meagre gold savings to the bank. It was not taken, for it was not needed, but it is available to the government at any time."

"Already in this very poor and aged couple's home is a government receipt for several hundred francs gold. That is all they get for their money, a government receipt. The peasants never try to collect on these receipts. They take them home and frame them roughly, and hang them on the wall. "It is the woolen sock bank that is going to put France on its feet so quickly after the war. Every penny of French indebtedness will be paid, strictly according to contract, both in France and America. And you will be amazed at the rapidity with which the French people will square away in business then."

"No matter how severe the drain of war is on the individual Frenchman's purse, he is saving a little, no matter how little that little may be, for the sunny day that will follow the present rainy one."

He Gets Nothing But Praise for Winning First Pennant

By HAMILTON

(United Press Staff Correspondent) NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Despite Brooklyn's defeat in the world's series there is one man connected with the Dodgers who never will receive anything but praise for his share of the work that won the first National League pennant for Brooklyn since the American League got into the big league field.

Wilbert Robertson is his name, and like most fat men, he is loved everywhere—even in Manhattan, where they have little time for love or anything else.

Robbie is one of the few active baseball men left from the "good old days" of the Baltimore Orioles, Hugh Jennings and John McGraw are two others.

Robbie has had a long experience in baseball, beginning in Haverhill, Mass., way back in 1885. In that city he was the battery mate of John K. Tener, then a budding pitching star and now president of the National League. Robbie went to the Athletics, then in the American Association, and became a member of the Orioles in 1890 when the American Association club in Philadelphia ceased to exist.

In 1900 Robbie and McGraw went to St. Louis, but their sojourn there was brief. From St. Louis they went back to Baltimore, where, with Joe Kelley, they became owners of the Oriole franchise, which subsequently passed to New York and now is the property of the Ruppert-Hustor duo. The trio forfeited the franchise in 1902 and Robbie became manager of the Baltimore club in the Eastern, now the International League.

In 1904 Robbie decided he was tired of baseball, so he "retired" for just four years, returning to the game in 1908. He drifted back by practicing with the Orioles in the mornings, and wound up by signing a contract to play with them. In 1906 John McGraw got Robbie's John Hancock to a Giant contract. He stayed in New York coaching Giant pitchers until 1914, when he went to Brooklyn to lead the Dodgers to victory.

Will Ask $50,000 for Marketing of Scenery

is to combine and advertise these scenic assets as one tour. The Board of Directors of the Association will locate a headquarters of the association in some Northwest city, from which all advertising matter relating to the tour will be sent out. Community booklets will be incidental to the tour, and if any are printed they will be at the expense of such communities.

Then the association will open offices and appoint agents in a number of Eastern cities. Each agent will have certain territory in which to work and it will be their duty to get acquainted with the traveling public and to sell the scenery and climate of the Northwest.

Inasmuch as a piece of the tourist dollar reaches every citizen, it has been thought that the State of Oregon should provide the money for carrying on the campaign. The tourist dollar is of particular interest to the farmer because the tourist is a large consumer of farm products as he travels along the roads. The tourist dollar is spent for meals and lodging, theater tickets, newspapers, cigars, street car fares, gasoline and auto service, for haberdashery, and for numerous other articles. No small part of it goes to labor, particularly at the garages and machine shops.

Therefore the Legislature of Oregon will be asked to provide the sum of $25,000 per annum for two years. The directors for Washington feel sure that their state will give an equal amount. British Columbia is to provide $12,500 per annum for two years.
