AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR TURNS GRAY, FADED HAIR DARK AND GLOSSY

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy, and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful hair restorer. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

FIRE FINDER IS PROVED SUCCESS

OSBORNE FINDER FOR FOREST FIRES FOUND TO BE SUCCESSFUL AND IS SENT TO WASHINGTON FOR EXHIBIT.

PORTLAND, Dec. 7.—District Forester George H. Cecil of Portland has just shipped a complete Osborne fire-finder outfit to Washington D. C. for exhibit purposes in the East. The instrument was invented by W. B. Osborne of the Portland office of the Forest Service and has proved a complete success. One hundred and twenty-five of the fire-finders were used by look-out men on the National Forests of Oregon and Washington during the season of 1915. It is a type of instrument that is in use at the Mount Hood lookout station 11,325 feet above sea level.

The fire-finder consists of a metal plate 24 inches in diameter, bearing a topographic map of the region where it is used. A graduated circle is laid out around the map. To the center of the plate is pivoted an alidade consisting of a straight edge and two sights, with an arm extending across the circle on which the course of the line of sight from the instrument to the fire is read. The plate and alidade are mounted on a short track which permits sliding the plate, when necessary, to avoid a post or window frame in sighting on a fire.

The instrument is securely mounted on a support at the proper height for convenient use and the map oriented so it is "square with the world." When used in the open where there are no obstructions, the track is unnecessary.

There is a simple attachment on the sights which permits reading the vertical angle of the fire under observation. When a fire is discovered, the lookout man turns the alidade until he has a line of sight on the fire and reads the true bearing on the graduated circle. He then reads the vertical angle of the fire. Referring to his topographic map he plots a profile of the country along this line of sight and, by drawing the line indicated by the vertical angle, locates or finds the fire at the point where this line intersects the profile.

The whole operation takes less than five minutes and the fire is located without the necessity of waiting until a second course upon it is reported from another station, as was formerly done.

The Osborne fire-finder is already in general use in this district and it is expected that it will become part of the standard equipment for fire lookout stations throughout the country. Requests for the instrument have been received by Mr. Cecil from the Canadian Forest Service and from a number of private timber owners' associations.

One Gone From the Quartet That Made War

KAISER WILHELM, SULTAN OF TURKEY, KING FERDINAND, EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH

Here are the four European rulers at war with most of the rest of the world. One of them—Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria, is gone. Another, the Sultan of Turkey, nominally rules, but has little influence in his government. The Kaiser of Germany and King Ferdinand of Bulgaria remain the two vigorous monarchs among the central powers and their allies.

Industrial Conditions Have Effect on Child

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 7.—That children's welfare from babyhood to adolescence is bound up with industrial conditions is emphasized by the recent work of the Federal Children's Bureau, of which the chief, Miss Julia C. Lathrop, tells in her fourth annual report made public today.

A study of infant mortality in Manchester, N. H., completed this year, adds new evidence that when the fathers' earnings are low or the mothers' work out of the home the infant mortality rate is exceptionally high. In Manchester it varies from one death among every four where fathers earn less than $450 to one death among every sixteen babies where fathers earn $1,050 or more.

Miss Lathrop's report refers to the effect of living conditions upon mothers and points out that the sickness or death of the mother lessens the baby's chances for life and health. The bureau has prepared a statistical study of maternal mortality and finds that 15,000 mothers die year by year in this country from largely preventable causes incident to maternity and that the death rate from maternal causes has not decreased since 1900.

Miss Lathrop says, in commenting upon this fact: "The means of prevention are the instruction of the mother, skilled supervision before the birth of her child, and suitable care during confinement. But she must have also nourishing food and sufficient rest and freedom from anxiety—in other words, decent living conditions."

Then the bureau has been concerned with the protection of the child himself from premature employment. It has published all the child labor laws in the United States and has completed a report on the administration of the employment certificate system in New York state. In commenting upon the new federal child labor law as marking a distinct advance in the attitude of this nation toward that one-third of its population which is under 16 years of age, Miss Lathrop says:

"Merely keeping the breath of life in children is valueless to the nation unless they are brought on to adult life trained masters of their full powers of body and mind. Their law is a national measure and all attainable information for a better understanding of the ways in which the children it sets free from labor may be started in life should be furnished by a national study."

"It is a matter of speculation as to what proportion of children at work are dependent upon their own earnings or support families in whole or in part. Also the number of dependent children now supported by public and private funds is unknown. In fact," Miss Lathrop says, "our ignorance of the whole field of dependency is great."

The report gives figures about Philadelphia indicating that the majority of dependent children are members of families and the question of protecting them is a question of family structure and support. Preliminary work toward a study of dependency has been done by the bureau, and Miss Lathrop expresses the hope that Congress may direct the Children's Bureau to make a special inquiry into the condition of the children to be affected by the federal laws.

INFANT'S TROUBLES END IN BABY CAB

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—Eight months ago a weary Syrian woman came to the Catholic Humane Bureau and left a two-months-old babe.

"I have been deserted by my husband and have no money," she said in broken English. "I have two children and cannot support this baby."

And so the baby found a happy start in life. The child was given into the care of Mrs. George McDougall. Mrs. McDougall went down town shopping yesterday and left the baby, wrapped snugly in the baby cab while she made purchases. Somehow the child squirmed under the covers and when Mrs. McDougall returned the infant's troubles had ended. She had smothered to death.

NEED OF BOYS IS REGULATED WORK

THIS RATHER THAN DESULTORY WORK IS RECOMMENDED BY A BOY SPECIALIST—CONFERENCE BEGINS FRIDAY.

CORVALLIS, Dec. 7.—Boys frequently fail to hold interest in their work because they have no regular program of activities in it. This is at least the view held by a number of leading boy specialists who will assist in conducting the activities of the Boys' Conference to be held in Corvallis for three days, beginning with Friday of this week.

"The American Standard Program for Boys," has been carefully worked out by the boys' work secretary of the International Y. M. C. A. and the opinion of specialists regarding its value are reported by some of them as follows:

"I believe the program will distance anything of its sort which has ever been prepared."—W. H. Burger, New York Y. M. C. A.

"It appeals to me strongly. It has two particularly strong points in my opinion—it takes boys upon the perfectly natural grouping and then leaves more than the usual plan to the initiative of the boys themselves."—A. B. Dale, State Secretary North Dakota.

"An excellent program of activities and an opportunity for the association to be of real service to the church by co-operation with the church in putting it through."—F. E. Gugleman, Rochester, N. Y.

The American Standard Program for Boys will be presented by J. C. Meehan, secretary of the boys' division of the Portland Y. M. C. A.
