details up to the advertising stage, and assures us a contract with Mr. Strahorn in this month and construction as soon as the bonds are sold, which will be the last step in the proceeding. You can see how necessary it is for the council to handle all these matters simultaneously. It is absolutely necessary that all these proceedings be taken tonight for another important reason.

"Mr. Strahorn cannot proceed to discussion of or to the submission of a bid until he has been furnished with rights-of-way and terminals, or has positive assurance that they will be forthcoming promptly. The citizens' committee charged with raising the funds by subscription to purchase terminals, etc., to enable Mr. Strahorn to proceed to contract with the city has been delayed awaiting the necessary action by the council above outlined. This committee cannot proceed to collect money until the council has removed all uncertainties.

"They must have prompt action by the council before they can move. Another important matter is that certain options have been taken by the committee which must be closed in the next few days.

"The whole proceeding rests upon the prompt and intelligent co-operation between the mayor, the council and the citizens' committee."

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

Notice is hereby given that our prices will be changed, taking effect the 13th of December.

Rough dry by the pound and the dozen will be eliminated from our list, as the increased cost of supplies, labor and general expense will not allow us nor any other laundry to work on the pound or dozen basis.

You will find our prices are as low and, in a great many instances, lower than laundries on the main line whose running expenses and freight rates are a great deal lower.

I thank you for your past patronage and hope to be able to continue serving you. Yours truly, and no detail work done until the council took action on the ordinance for sale of the bonds, which was read twice last Monday and will come up for final passage tonight.

Siemens is ready to write his name for $5,000, another man is ready to do the same for the same amount, and many others are waiting only tonight's action by the council. The committee declares its ability to raise money for terminals and grounds, if the council tonight will act so it can get in-black and white the names of men who are willing to give, and give liberally.

Moving Pictures

Mrs. Dufrane, queen of the Paris Apaches, pleads with the judge of the French court to spare judgment on her son, who is arraigned before him charged with theft. But he is deaf to her entreaties, and sentences the youth to the gallows. Heartbroken, Mrs. Dufrane, who loves this boy better than her life, retires to the den of the Apaches, determined that the judge shall suffer. Then, with the assistance of her eldest son, she kidnaps the judge's infant daughter, Julie, and escapes with her to the den.

Julie is raised as an Apache. She is taught to steal with such expertness as to escape the shrewdest of the police. But, with her instinctive refinement, Julie rebels against her teachers, and is severely beaten, and threatened with death by strangulation. Made desperate, she packs her few belongings, and takes shelter in the studio of a young American artist, for whom she has posed several times. These two fall in love, and he attempts to protect and safeguard Julie, but one day she ventures out on the street, and the Apaches seize her and carry her back to the den. Mrs. Dufrane, her hatred aroused, orders her band to strangle her.

Meanwhile Julie's old nurse, who has been reduced to the position of selling trinkets on the streets, has seen Julie carried into the house of the Apaches at 17 Rue Mort, and warns the judge, her father. Also the young artist learns of her danger, and rushes with the gendarmes to the stronghold, where Julie is rescued just as the Apaches are about to put her to death. Of course, the artist is entitled to some reward for his boldness, and he proposes that the judge let him have Julie's hand in marriage. And being a good father, if a stern justice, he gives his daughter to the young man with his blessing. At the Star tonight.
