POLICY IS NOT TO BE CHANGED

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 21.—"The United States government is not considering any change in its policy of neutrality toward belligerents," announced Robert Lansing, secretary of state, this afternoon in a formal statement supplementing his earlier statement issued this morning. The second statement was issued because the first has been subject to "various constructions I did not mean to convey." Secretary Lansing said it may be necessary to send a supplementary note explaining or supplementing the first note if the belligerents have misconstrued the first. When asked if the first statement still stands, Secretary Lansing replied: "Certainly. The second would be unintelligible without the first."

CAR CONGESTION MAKES MEN IDLE

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—Over 40,000 employees will be thrown out of work next Saturday when the Ford automobile plant will close down. It will remain closed until January 2.

MOVING PICTURES

A remarkable play is "The Price of Power," the Fine Arts-Triangle production. It is full of realism in character, a modern action with full operation, a strike in which breadbakers and club figure and a thrilling struggle between a worthless action of an idle rich woman and a beautiful factory girl. There is such swift action in the play and it is so lightened with touches of humor that any too intensely tragic feature is made endurable and the whole effect is appealing and worth while. Orvis Johnson plays with versatility three different roles, representing the same man under different circumstances and at different times in his career.

The program at the Star tonight and Friday night will be featured by Rita May, violin-harp entertainer, introducing what has been termed America's greatest musical marvel. Rita May invented the violin-harp, a combination of both instruments, played with steel rods or sticks. The Seattle Times says, regarding her performance in Seattle recently: "Jammed house last night at the Grand Theater gave much applause to Rita May and her most original musical instrument."
