Debate—Resolved that Anarchy is worse than Despotism. Affirmative, Otto Balin, Marion Green; negative, Lester Schriener, William Green.

Roy Dixon, who has been ill, has returned to school.

Dick and Pat Brown have been enrolled in the eighth grade.

A number of Henley students attended a surprise party that was held at the home of A. B. Green this week in honor of the Misses Bertha and Ella Green. The Greens are to move to California soon. The evening was spent in playing games and other amusements.

The basketball team held a meeting this week, and elected Otto Balin captain.

The pupils of the primary room, in charge of Miss Vlasta Dobry, are preparing for a short Christmas program.

B. W. Short is building an addition to his house.

The Henley school will be closed until January 2, 1917.

COMB SAGE TEA
INTO GRAY HAIR

CARKENS BEAUTIFULLY AND RESTORES ITS NATURAL COLOR AND LUSTRE AT ONCE

'Common sense sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous. Mixing the sage tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 5 cents a bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of mess. While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application of two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and lustrous and you appear years younger. Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

By GEORGE MARTIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
AT THE NORTH POLE, Dec. 22.—(Via Wireless)—It was pitch dark when the United Press man got here to see Santa Claus this year; and he had to ring the sleighbells at the main entrance of Santa's big silver barn a long time before anybody answered. Finally a big, cheery voice inside called out:

"Hello, there! Why don't you turn on the lights?"

"Where are they?" the reporter called back.

"Why," said Santa with a chuckle, as he rolled back one of the big, black marble doors and stepped out, "they're where the Northern Lights ought to be—in this gold and silver box fastened to the North Pole over here." So saying he switched them on, and say, weren't they beauties.

Maybe you've seen the Northern Lights; great, glowing shafts of purple and crimson and white, all laced and woven with the softest hues and tints you ever saw.

"I was a bit worn out, getting ready for the trip," said Santa, as he turned around and shook hands, "and I was just getting a little nap. Won't you sit down?" We walked over to a big frosted snow bench in front of the barn.

Things were a lot different than they were when the reporter was up here last year. The gigantic silver barn, with the hundred reindeer, the heavy sets of spun gold harness and the Christmas sleigh that a regiment of soldiers could walk around in, were scattered around the North Pole as far as you could see in all directions. The reporter knew that pretty soon the hundreds of little Santa Claus children, each one looking like a Tom Thumb edition of Santa himself, would be coming and tumbling out of the barn and so scuttling around over the hills of gifts, putting the right label on each one.

All that was here last year. This year there was something more. All around the big silver barn there were hundreds of little barns, and every one of them built of hammered gold and green marble. And in each one of them was a little polished steel sleigh and fifty teams of baby reindeer.

"I see what you're looking at," said Santa Claus, "and I suppose you're wondering what the idea is." Of course the reporter was wondering, so Santa explained:

"I've been trying to do too much all by myself. The world is growing so fast, there are so many more little boys and girls and grown ups than there used to be, and I am getting so old that I had to get somebody to help me or else give up trying to get all around to everybody in one night.

"I was talking to Mars about it the other day, and he offered to build me a giant aeroplane and a Zeppelin and a motor truck for land work and a submarine a hundred times bigger than any ever built.

"Mars was very kind about it, and I appreciated his offer, but I'm an old fashioned duffer in a way, and I didn't like to give up the sleigh and reindeer, so I just put up these little barns and filled them with sleighs and baby reindeer, and the children are going to help me tomorrow night.

"But Santa Claus," said the reporter, "do you mean that you won't get around to all the places yourself?"

"Oh, no, I don't mean that," said Santa quickly, "I'll go every place, just as usual; but the youngsters will do all the heavy work. Their sleighs will carry most of the packages. I'll wait on all the roofs and the young chaps will scout up and down the chimneys with the gifts."

Just then the Northern Lights went out and it was day. There was an awful commotion in the big barn, and all of a sudden the sliding doors rolled back and out scampered the little Santa Clauses, whooping and yelling and tumbling over one another.

"Well," said Santa Claus, jumping up, you can easily see I've got my hands full now."

And the reporter, realizing that Santa and the little fellows crowding round him faced a hard day's work, he shook hands with Santa, said goodby to the hopping, skipping little Santas and hurried away.
