

Republicans Fight Democrats on Leak

REPUBLICANS ARE ON THE AGGRESSIVE

Lenroot Says Congressman Was Involved in Peace Note Leak, and Was a Democrat—Wood Says Democrats Are Afraid of an Investigation—Lawson is Characterized as a "Frenzied Fourflusher."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—I am compelled to conclude that a congressman was involved in the leak on President Wilson's peace note, and that he was a democrat," dramatically declared Representative Lenroot, republican, on the floor of the house today. The democrats hissed concertedly.

"Failure of the house to continue the investigation of the peace note leak will confirm public opinion in the belief that congress doesn't dare to investigate," Representative Wood, who started the investigation, asserted. This speech precipitated a battle royal between the republicans and the democrats.

Representative Wood flatly refused to apologize to either R. W. Holling, broker and brother-in-law of President Wilson, or to Joseph Tumulty, secretary to the president.

Representative Harrison, democrat, scored Thomas W. Lawson as an "irresponsible frenzied fourflusher," and said the republicans were abetting him in his charges of a leak. Harrison declared that after six days of investigation no evidence has been found to substantiate the charges made by Lawson or Wood.

Representative Henry, chairman of the house rules committee, said he proposed to see Lawson punished.

Republicans Win WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—After a three hours' fight the republicans were victorious. By unanimous consent the leak investigation was referred back to the rules committee, with instructions to report within ten days.

Skins of Klamath county jackrabbits will bring from 15 to 18 cents a pound in St. Louis, according to a letter received this morning by Klamath Commercial Club from Funston Bros. & Co. There is an outlet for these skins in any amounts that can be furnished, says the letter.

The freight to St. Louis is 6 1/2 cents a pound, which would leave a margin of 10 or 11 cents.

The letter from the furriers is printed below in full, that local people may know just what the outlet for jackrabbit skins is:

"Replying to your letter of recent date, beg to say, we shall be glad to receive all the jackrabbit skins you can collect, and will allow you from 15 to 18 cents per pound for them, delivered St. Louis—the price depending upon the quantities that can be furnished and the general condition of the skins.

It will not be necessary for you to stretch the skins on stretchers—just lay them flat on the floor or on racks to dry, and when they are dry and as fast as you can get a good sized lot bale them up and ship by freight. On receipt of the skins we will promptly remit to cover. The skins may be taken off either cased or open. If there is any other information desired we shall be pleased to hear from you. We are confident you will find it decidedly to your interest to collect these skins, and we have an outlet for all you can ship.

Wilson Will Make Peace Move Soon

TRIAL OF DOYLE DRAWS CROWD OF EAGER LISTENERS

CIRCUIT COURT ROOM IS PACKED EACH DAY

Former and Present County Officials Testifying Regarding Observations Made When They Arrived at Ranch House in Langell Valley Where Two Women Met Death From Shotgun Wounds.

In a court room crowded to the limit with eager spectators, the trial of William Doyle, charged with murder, goes on before Judge D. V. Kuykendall. This is the third day of taking testimony, and only four witnesses have been examined.

These are E. B. Henry, county surveyor, who made drawings of the house in which the tragedy occurred; Earl Whitlock, coroner, who prepared the bodies of the victims for burial; John Irwin, former district attorney, and Lloyd Low, former deputy sheriff. Irwin and Low told of their acts as officers when they arrived at the ranch house in Langell Valley, where the women lost their lives. Henry and Whitlock also were there.

Doyle's defense is expected to rest on the proposition that Mary Wilcox and Maggie Jones lost their lives by an accidental discharge of a double-barreled shotgun while in a tussle with Doyle over its possession. Doyle told such a story when the officers arrived at the ranch, and Attorney Renner's cross examination of the state's witnesses indicates that a defense of accident will be set up. The shotgun was a muzzle loader, and in the house was found powder and shot.

Witnesses have declared that both barrels had been discharged when the officers arrived. Each of the victims was killed by a gunshot wound. Mrs. Wilcox being shot in the face and Mrs. Jones in the neck.

BELIEVES SECOND STEP WILL BE LONGER

Nation's President Says First Step Has Been Successfully Accomplished—Reply of Entente Powers Regarded as Formal Play for Public Sympathy—Germans Will Now Wait for Allies to Move.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—President Wilson believes the first move toward peace in Europe has been successfully accomplished. He believes another move will soon follow, and that the next will constitute a longer step toward peace than the first.

Officials here regard the peace communications from the belligerents as formal plays for public sympathy or as "bombastic feelers."

President Wilson is now seeking for something tangible upon which to base his next move for peace.

Germany Won't Act WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Germany won't attempt to bargain with the allies for peace unless encouraged by America or by another entente communication. German diplomats here made this declaration today when shown the United Press cable from London, saying the peace cause had been given a shove by the allied reply, which "infernally invites Germany to bargain for peace."

SHIVERING SUFFS INVITED TO WARM

PRESIDENT WILSON ASKS PICKETS AROUND WHITE HOUSE TO COME IN AND GET WARM, BUT WOMEN DECLINE POLITELY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—The shivering suffragettes, acting as pickets around the White House, were surprised yesterday when President Wilson invited them to come inside and get warm.

When the women recovered from the shock of the invitation, they sent back a polite refusal.

In addressing suffragists at the Bois-sevain memorial, President Wilson expressed regret that "so many ardent souls" in the suffrage movement failed to appreciate that the democrats were more inclined to help the cause than the opposition. He informed the women that he couldn't do more than has already been done.
