

"Arizona Charley" is To Be Seen No More

Mind Went Wrong When Wife Was Killed in Train Wreck Caused by Broken Rails

Since Looking for Broken Rails

EL PASO, Tex., Jan. 18.—They have taken "Arizona Charley" away. No more will the light hearted transcontinental tourist catch a glimpse of the bent, grizzled old man trudging along the lonely tracks on the desert as they flash by. He was one of the best known characters of the Southwest.

Twenty years ago "Arizona Charley" was an engineer on the Southern Pacific. One day at the end of his run he got word that his bride of a few months had been killed in a train wreck. A broken rail had caused the wreck. He resigned and began walking the tracks over the 500 mile stretch of desert between Yuma and El Paso, looking for broken rails. With a blanket and a frying pan slung over his shoulder he has tramped his beat, winter and summer, for twenty years, reporting defects in the track to the nearest section house. He has never ridden on a train since his wife was killed.

Nearly every tourist over the southwestern route has seen "Arizona Charley." Conductors and Pullman porters always pointed him out as the train sped past, leaving him a speck in the desert.

Of late years the old man has become feeble, and now the Cochise county court has adjudged him insane, and committed him to the state asylum.

"Handcuff King" Gives a Statue

HARRY HOUDINI

After John Drew had presented to Sarah Bernhardt, "in the name of the actors of America," a statuette of herself, the widow of the sculptor sent her a bill. "The actors of America" had failed to pay for their gift. Thereupon Harry Houdini, the "handcuff king," who is not recognized by "the actors of America," concluded it was a rather shabby piece of business, and he paid the widow for the statuette.
