Americans and Canadians Thinking and Independent

Lord Northcliffe, Best Known of Englishmen Newspaper Publishers, Tells of Americans Fighting in Allies' Ranks

(Note—Following is the second story written for the United Press by Lord Northcliffe. The first told how American soldiers in the British and French armies live and what they do in the great war. This one gives a graphic picture of the sort of work American aviators do, and tells what the American soldier thinks of his work—Editor.)

Do You Remember When We Were Young?

We were sweethearts then, like all of the other folks, and we gave each other a valentine. That was such a long time ago.

It is such an old legend, and the good St. Valentine was a lover like you and me. His heart was big. It's funny, but the times haven't changed a bit.

VALENTINES

are still love's little remembrance, just one of those genuine delights for the little folks, and some of us big folks are lovers, too! If you belong to the loving-folks crowd you will go to Upp's to buy your valentines, dainty, pretty, tinseled gifts for St. Valentine's day; also valentine decorations for house parties.

mire him in mass fighting and for his machine like discipline, but they have no use for him in the kind of warfare now going on.

"You will find the Canadians and Americans a thinking, independent army," remarked a distinguished British general, who had given me permission to spend this very interesting day—and so I found them to be. They had brought to the stock of vitality and knowledge embraced in the wonderful citizen armies of France and England the qualities inherited by generations which have spanned the North American continent with its railroads, chained Niagara, linked up the world's cities and armies by the telephone. It dugouts with incandescent lamps, cheered them with "canned music," and brought a thousand other mechanical ideas to perfection.

I confess, indeed, that although I have spent many weeks at war, the spectacle of winged fighters high in the sunlight is one that holds my attention as nothing in the world ever has in peace time. When one was younger one has been thrilled by a close baseball or football match—but when sheltered, perhaps, in a trench, one sees two specks approaching each other and with a pair of strong glasses gradually realizes that one of the specks is an American who has given up everything—home, prosperity and probably life—to throw himself into a foreign army, and that the other is a brave German, doing what he conceives to be his duty—one realizes that here are two combatants worth watching.

Very rarely do the Germans venture over our lines, and one has to be very far forward nowadays to get a good view of a fight between the allies and the enemy in the air. I have had that good fortune several times. The air fighting of 1914 bears as much resemblance to the air fighting of 1917 as an old steam automobile to the six-cylinder of today. There is a perpetual match in speeding up between the enemy and the allies. Four or five miles an hour extra pace means everything. It's not an increase of engine power to over 200 horsepower that brought about the change so much as the wonderful progress in the art of flying itself, and it is just here that the Anglo-Saxon and the Frenchman beats the slower minded German. It is just this reason why German soldiers' letters are now so full of complaint about over-cautious German aviators.

I talked with one of our wounded boys—he was just 19—who had fallen 8,000 feet owing to his rudder wire connection being shot through. By a miracle his machine straightened itself out automatically within 100 yards of the ground, and the boy is alive and will fly again. I asked him his sensations. He is probably the first man in the world who has fallen

8,000 feet—more than ten times the height of the Woolworth building.

He said that for a long time—what seemed like hours—he knew he was falling at a tremendous speed, and then he lost consciousness. As in a dream he found himself being picked up out of the wreck of his machine by people who thought he was dead.

At the beginning of an air fight there is maneuvering for positions and feinting, as in boxing. There are, as a rule, two men in each machine, a pilot and an observer, except in the smaller types, in which the wings are clipped down to nothing to get extra speed and climbing power. Knowledge of the engine and plane power, quickness of decision and accuracy in shooting with the Lewis gun are essential to the pilot. His observer is provided with some form of a pistol and often with bombs.

Rival planes, like giant hawks, hover around above or below each other until one, more expert or more daring than the other maneuvers his opponent into a position from which he has either got to fight or flee. The knockout blow is usually a sudden descent on the enemy, accompanied by accurate machine gun fire. Sometimes it becomes a duel with Browning pistols, in which the men are so close that they can see each other's eyes. The thing is over before you realize it. One machine is off and away, and the other whirls and crashes down to earth.

The British army does not permit the names of its flying heroes to be published. In telling you, therefore, of American flyers, I must deal with those Americans in the French army. Lieutenant Thaw of Pittsburgh was one of a number of Americans who entered the famous Foreign Legion of the French army at the outbreak of the war, and is now senior American flying officer in France.

His name and that of his colleagues are better known in Europe than in their own country. In giving a list of those whose names are known, some, alas, lying beneath a wooden cross, I can say no more than that they are worthy representations of a great nation.

Lieutenant Thaw was followed by Bert Hall of Texas; James Bach, D. Mason, Silas Lufberry, James McConnell of Chicago; Chouteau Johnson of New York; Elliott Cowdin, Kiffin Rockwell, Clyde Baisley of Texas; Dudley Hill of Peekskill, N. Y., and Victor Chapman.

The policy of American aviators serving with the French army is that of the British and French—to attack. They have played a goodly part in the invention of constantly changing tactics of fighting.

FUGITIVES CAN'T GET INTO EUROPE

RECRUITING OFFICERS OF EUROPE ASK SO MUCH ABOUT FOREIGNER THAT BAD MAN COULDN'T EXPLAIN

LONDON, Feb. 1.—American fugitives from justice can't escape to Europe any more. They have to prove too many things about themselves that it's inconvenient to prove before they can get either in or out.

Probably the only Americans arriving in Europe nowadays without first asking permission of Uncle Sam are, occasionally sailors who ship out of American ports under careless skipper. As soon as they set foot on European shores they are arrested and held until their ship leaves for a neutral port.

But the old pre-war brand of extradition, which provided its almost daily yarn for American and European papers, is dead.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

EAT LESS MEAT IF YOU FEEL BACKACHY OR HAVE BLADDER TROUBLE

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night. To neutralize these irritating acids and flush out the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.—Adv.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

To clear up your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more yawning, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—relief comes so quickly.—Adv.
