FUR FARMING—A NEW INDUSTRY

Its Possibilities on the Eastern Slope of the Oregon Cascades—By C. W. H. Heideman

(Editor's Note—The writer is a retired naturalist who was for many years employed by the government in charge of horticultural, botanical and landscape work in Yellowstone National Park; has spent twelve years in Alaska as an agent and expert of the department of agriculture. Three years of constant travel in Siberia investigating fur farming problems tempts him to offer some suggestions as to the possibilities of an opportunity that is now knocking at our doors. Mr. Heideman is spending the winter on the banks of Four Mile Lake at the base of Mt. Pitt, studying this industry now. His article will appear continuously in the Evening Herald this week.)

I am writing this in the shade of Mt. Pitt, at the very summit of the Cascades—the Garden of the Gods—cradled in sleet and snow, rocked in icy storm, only an enthusiastic naturalist investigating the possibilities of a great opportunity would dare to brave the storms above the clouds. Focused through twenty years of study and investigation, I am offering these suggestions in the hope that they will get the ear of "higher ups," who can press the button for further investigation.

Fur bearing animals are getting scarcer every year. To one who has seen the past, it seems only a step into the future when the last chapter of the drama of extinction will be written. While public sentiment has justly condemned the use of dead birds as articles of adornment, furs, ever since prehistoric man clad himself in skins, have been and will be demanded for comfort.

If the supply of furs be continued it will have to be from furs raised in captivity—fur farming. Nature's lodge has been worked to bed rock, and is almost exhausted. Fur farming has gone beyond the experimental stage, and is now a demonstrated success where conditions are favorable.

Fur farming is distinctly a poor man's proposition, requires but very little capital, some patience, some experience, and a natural love for the isolation incident to successful operation.

Fur farming is an occupation open to women. Many women have been remarkably successful. The work is not hard or exacting. It requires just enough of the patience and attention to the little details, and a temperament which especially fits women for the work.

Better fur can be raised in captivity than the wild. The killing, skinning and curing can be done at the right time and under the most favorable conditions. By castration of the males, judicious feeding and treatment, larger and better skins can be secured.

By selective breeding and judicious crossing a strain of larger, darker colored animals with that rare quality known to the fur trade as "silky," can be secured.

Furs are getting more valuable as the wild catch decreases. Read the story of the buffalo, the fur seal, the sea otter and the beaver, now practically commercially extinct.

When a litter of marten can be raised as easily as a litter of kittens and sold at eight months for from $50 to $100 at present fur prices of furs—when a litter of silver foxes can be raised as easily as a litter of pups and sold within the year at $5,000, it does not need a Colonel Sellers to see possibilities of profits. The writer has done this.

If my readers will pardon personal allusion, I have seen considerable of the frontier—I undertook the first scientific experimental work in fur farming ever undertaken under government patronage, and at a time when tradition said, "It can't be done." I venture the statement that there is no region in the world that possesses the natural advantages and conditions for fur farming with less drawbacks as does the eastern slope of the Cascades of Klamath county, Oregon.

A VISION

An old man sat at the close of day,
And peacefully fell asleep,
And the dreams that came to him as he slept
Would make good citizens weep.

It seemed that the months had been lost in years,
And the years into decades had grown,
And Klamath's history was revealed;
Her shameful past made known.

She seemed to be standing the same as of old,
In isolation lone;
Shut off from all the outside world,
Unknowing and unknown.

Bob Strahorn had done his very best;
He had talked with might and main,
The women had helped to raise the cash;
Men had given, and given again.

But the opportunity had passed
In days and years gone by;
For some held tight to their gold and said,
"The fools may help, not I."

And the old man dreamed that the moss was deep
On many a stubborn back;
And though the work was well begun,
They never laid a track.

And he dreamed that the town had gone to seed,
Progressives all had said goodbye,
And were living in lands more fair.

The man awoke with a mighty start,
As an engine gave a scream,
And he said, as the Strahorn train whizzed by,
"Thank God, it was only a dream."

No sadder story I'll ever tell,
By word of mouth or pen,
Than this: "A dead town slumbers here,
Where a live one might have been."
—Jeremiah Jenkins.

Missouri Pacific Sold

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The steamer Orlean, the first American ship carrying contraband to brave German blockade since the break in German-American relations, which sailed from this port February 14th, is due in the submarine zone on her way to Bordeaux today.

The Orlean is a 5,000 ton freight steamer laden with contraband for the French government. Whether news will come today that she has been sunk without warning by the Germans remains to be seen. The Orlean sailed unarmed, unstriped, flying the American flag and owned, officered and mostly operated by Americans.

The Orlean is owned by the Oriental Navigation company of 17 Battery Place, New York, and it is her first trip under American registry. Should this boat be sunk "without warning" by a submarine commander, it might bring to a sharp climax the strained situation between Germany and the United States.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 22.—The administration's naval bill, with its appropriations increased $128,000, 000 since it passed the house, was reported to the senate yesterday afternoon by the naval committee.

Sinking of This Schooner May Force U. S. Into War

When the American schooner Lyman M. Law was sunk by a submarine a cause which may bring the United States into the European war was established. The Law, with Captain Chatfield in command, was bound from Stockton, Me., to Palermo, Sicily. She carried cargo of lumber, which was non-contraband, and a full crew of Americans. The American agents of the vessel were the Marine Transportation company of New York.

LAKEVIEW HOLDS SECOND ELECTION

BONDING COMPANY FAILS TO COMPLY WITH LAW AND NOTICES POSTED FOR SECOND ELECTION NEXT MONTH

LAKEVIEW, Feb. 22.—Owing to the fact that Keeler Brothers, the firm of Denver attorneys who handled the railroad bond issue, failed to comply with the law, it will be necessary to hold another election.

This election will be held on the 5th of March, 1917, and then it is hoped that everything will be in satisfactory shape, so that matters can be terminated very quickly. The town authorities feel very much disappointed over the fact that Keeler Brothers overlooked an important item in the holding of the election, but will do everything in their power to expedite matters the second time.

The notices of election and the copies of the ordinance calling the election have been posted about town and all the copy which it will be necessary to print is now in the printer's hands.

TOURISTS SPEND MORE IN FRANCE

STATEMENT MADE BY AMERICAN SHOWS THAT TOURISTS SPEND MILLIONS MORE THAN RELIEF WORK SECURES

PARIS, Feb. 1.—(By mail)—Walls Americans have left an average of $100,000,000 annually in France seeking pleasures, they have only contributed about $12,000,000 since the war to the benefit of French wounded and homeless.

This statement is made by the American Relief Clearing House in an appeal to Americans for more funds and necessities to carry on the work. In a pamphlet just issued the relief organization looks back to the American revolution, when money advanced by France practically saved the American government from dissolution. At the beginning of 1780, in America, a Continental dollar was worth two cents a bushel of corn, $150 and a suit of clothes $2,000.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

MARKS BEAUTIFULLY AND RESTORES ITS NATURAL COLOR AND LUSTRE AT ONCE

Common garden sage brewed into a savory tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and aged hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the sage tea and sulphur "recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 10 cents a bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wright's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wright's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application of two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wright's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

WOMEN! READ THIS!

Lift off any corn or callus with fingers and it won't hurt a bit.

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on the bottom of your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone like here shown can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Don't limp or twist your face in agony and spoil your beauty, but get a little bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you can lift it off with your fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn of a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses without suffering one particle. You feel no pain or irritation while applying freezone or afterwards. It is magic!—Adv.
