FUR FARMING—A NEW INDUSTRY

Its Possibilities on the Eastern Slope of the Oregon Cascades—By C. W. H. Heideman

(Editor's Note—The writer is a retired naturalist who was for many years employed by the government in charge of horticultural, botanical and landscape work in Yellowstone National Park; has spent twelve years in Alaska as an agent and expert of the department of agriculture. Three years of constant travel in Siberia investigating fur farming problems tempt him to offer some suggestions as to the possibilities of an opportunity that is now knocking at our doors. Mr. Heideman is spending the winter on the banks of Four Mile Lake at the base of Mt. Pitt, studying this industry now. His article will appear continuously in the Evening Herald this week.)

(Continued from Thursday's Herald) Klamath county has the altitude, the snows, the storms and winds and other climatic factors for the production of high grade furs without the human hardships of the Far North.

Breeding stock from the wild, such as beaver, otter, marten, fisher, mink and ermine can yet be obtained at minimum cost. The necessary food supply, such as rabbits, pine squirrels and fish (suckers) can be obtained in quantity at little cost. No one who has not been in the mountains in winter can conceive of the abundance of animal life that exists—each preying upon the other.

The unused public lands of this region offer thousands of desirable locations now a vast region of almost worthless lodgepole. No encroachment need be made on the valuable timber areas of the national forests; no vested rights interfered with. Converting unused, valueless lands now producing predatory animals and pests—a menace to agriculture and a burden to the taxpayer, into farms and homes for land-hungry men and women—into lands capable of producing bank accounts equal to the famous Rogue River orchard lands. This is conservation as we of the West understand conservation.

It is because I have been a student of the problem all my life, and because I have seen the tragedies being enacted on nature's stage, that I see possibilities of an industry second only to logs and lumber—possibilities of speedily developing this vast, unused region—and better still, possibilities of seeing prosperous, contented happy settlers where now the coyote roams—each a factor in developing a Greater Oregon.

To actualize the possibilities of fur-farming in this region three things are essential:

- 1—A scientific demonstration under the auspices of the State Fish and Game Commission or some Commercial Club;
2—Secure by legislation or through the State Fish and Game Commission a modification of existing laws.
3—Secure the co-operation or consent of the forest service in opening for homestead entry non-commercial timbered lands not considered strictly within the agricultural zone, but adapted for fur farming.

A demonstration of fur farming should be made under the auspices of the state commission or a commercial

HIGH SCHOOLS TALK LEAGUE

SUGGESTED THEY BE GROUPED GEOGRAPHICALLY—KLAMATH COUNTY WOULD BE IN SOUTHERN GROUP

SALEM, Feb. 23.—An invitation to assist in systematizing of Oregon high school athletics by forming athletic leagues, grouped geographically, is made in a letter addressed to the principals of the high schools by W. D. Fletcher, director of physical education of the Salem high school.

It is proposed to divide the state into five leagues—the Willamette, the South, the Columbia, the Eastern, the Interior, and if possible the Portland. The officers of these leagues would be subject to the board of control of the Oregon High School Athletic Association.

Each school in the league is to be represented at the meetings by principal, coach and student. An outline of the work of the officers of the league is given by Director Fletcher, who says:

"Each league should have a committee to decide protests and disputes. Representatives in each league should meet annually. At this meeting the coaches could arrange a schedule for the coming season, to include football, basketball, baseball, track and cross-country running."

The proposed division into leagues follows: Columbia League—The Dalles, Forest Grove, Astoria, Oregon City, Vancouver and Tillamook.

Willamette League—Albany, Newberg, Eugene, Salem, Corvallis, McMinnville, Amity, Mill City, Union, Woodburn, Hillsboro and Jefferson.

South—Klamath Falls, Grants Pass, Ashland, Roseburg, Medford and Oakland.

Eastern—Baker, Lostine, Elgin, Pendleton, La Grande, Wallowa.

Making New York Impregnable

The commencement of the construction of a new fort near Rockaway Point, within New York city, coupled with the placing of 16-inch guns at Sandy Hook, will make New York, the chief point of attack in case of invasion, impregnable to the greatest fleets of the world. The guns at Sandy Hook and those to be placed on Rockaway Point will have a radius of at least twenty miles with mere battery elevation. No ship standing off the port will be able to shoot into the city nor any part of what is known as the "Metropolitan District" against these guns of the forts. Two 16-inch guns have been placed at Sandy Hook, but ground has just been broken for the new fort at Rockaway. Some 312 acres will be included in that reservation, and work is being rushed night and day.

WESTERN UNION TO GIVE TRAINING

WORD RECEIVED AT LOCAL OFFICE TELLS OF BONUS TO BE GIVEN MANAGER—OPERATORS FOR TRAINING OPERATORS

The Western Union Telegraph company has offered a bonus to about 1,000 manager-operators in small cities and towns for each junior operator such managers shall enlist and train. This unusual step arises out of the extraordinary growth in the use of the telegraph and the consequent need for competent operators to handle the company's business with the dispatch which its standards require.

Any person—man or woman, over the age of 16 and with the requisite education and intelligence can become a junior operator. The company provides the necessary instruction free. When the junior grade is reached, employment is assured.

In the larger cities, telegraph schools are already maintained for teaching operators. These, however, have not been able to turn out a sufficient number of trained men and women to wholly meet the present demands. It is now sought to give persons in smaller places as well as the cities an opportunity to study telegraphy, either by exclusive application or in conjunction with their other employment.
