ing in with the company in order to help them defeat his rights against the company for not fulfilling their contract with him. It is considered there are many complicated questions in the case, both of law and facts, which are of much interest both to lawyers and to any persons buying goods and giving notes on time contracts.

While in Portland, Mr. Brower enjoyed the opportunity of personally meeting many of the boys of Troop A and Battery A of the Oregon National Guards, on their return from the border at Calexico; and also of being present at the ceremonies of opening the great interstate bridge at Vancouver. He says the bridge is not only the longest in the world, but is certainly a beauty in construction for strength and permanency.

Over $10,000 for Protection of Forests 1916

they sometimes start. The human enemy is no more desired than the lightning.

To the thoughtful, forward looking woodsman the yearly addition to the accumulation of dead material on the ground represents a constant menace. It is impossible for us here to ignore the patent fact that in certain localities the danger from this source is increasing year by year. In order to minimize this hazard to an extent consistent with reasonable expense, this association has been engaged for years in constructing strategic roads and trails, and extending its telephone lines to every danger point.

It has been the theory of the management of this association that no beetle control work should be undertaken in timber likely to be logged off within five years. It appears more than likely that from the several logging operations around the Klamath Lake and through this untreated tract tree-killing beetles are filtering into the timber embraced in our original control operations, but that prompt attention on our part should head off serious damage.

The Silver Lake infestation no longer presents the serious aspect of 1914, but it yet contains vast possibilities of harm, and is one of the spots we are still watching carefully.

It is encouraging to report that the forest service has secured some appropriation for beetle work, and it is to be hoped that we may yet receive the same co-operation from them in this line that they give in the fire protection. Much infestation originates on national forests and drifts into our timber.

The financial report shows that a total of $10,488.70 was spent in protecting the forests of this area from fire and beetle and for construction work. Of this $8,230.97 was spent for salaries and $2,257.73 for construction work and miscellaneous items.

In the fire protection department, $6,870.81 was expended in salaries and $1,748.48 in construction work. In the protection from pine beetle, $1,360.16 in salaries and $509.25 for miscellaneous items.

Moving Pictures

The following is a short synopsis of the five-act photodrama, "When a Woman Loves," at the Star tonight: Ruth, a waitress in a cheap restaurant, contributes what she can to the support of her family at home, until the mother's ill health brings the domestic situation to a crisis. Having insufficient money for their needs, Ruth is tempted to "play the horses," at which, after losing, she dons male attire, and entering the poolroom, is arrested in a raid. After a night in the station house her identity is disclosed, as also, her inability to pay the fine. A wealthy young attorney, Arthur Lowe, on the scene at the time, straightens matters out. Ruth, however, has lost her position, and in seeking another, at a beautiful summer hotel, runs into her elder sister, who some time before left home for the gay life of the city, in company with two pseudo gentlemen—card sharps, one of whom she lives with. The other, Powers, is quick to realize that Ruth's prettiness will prove a wonderful decoy for their victims.

Precautions Go for Nought Sometimes

—but most times they effect their purpose. We are surprised when a pair of our shoes proves defective. It has happened, of course, but it happens only by a combination of circumstances which it is beyond human skill to control.

To begin, the manufacturers of our shoes are as jealous of their reputation as we are of ours. From the selection of leathers to the packing of the shoes, every process is in the hands of experts—thousands of dollars are spent annually to see that not one shoe is faulty.

Then the shoes are inspected by this store. Every one of our salespeople knows that on no account must a defective shoe be sold.

Yet the thing will happen, but all we ask of our customers is that in fairness they will give us the opportunity to set such accidents right.
