KEEP THE TABLE SUPPLIED WITH FRESH VEGETABLES UNTIL WINTER COMES

Let one crop follow another and keep the garden busy. Many persons who have been paying little attention to gardening do not realize to what extent this is possible, but if we are to cope successfully with the threatened food shortage it will be necessary to make every square foot of soil count as many times as possible.

CULTIVATION OF BEANS

As soon as the beans emerge from the soil cultivation should begin. The first cultivation should be thorough, stirring all of the soil to a depth of about three inches. Later cultivations must be made to kill weeds while they are still small. These cultivations may be made somewhat shallower than the first. Beans should never be cultivated when wet with dew or rain, as that is a means of spreading disease. Planting—Seeding of beans taken place as early as possible after the ground warms up well and frost danger is over. Beans are usually seeded in rows thirty inches apart, and about two to four inches apart in the row. Under irrigated conditions, they are sometimes planted in double rows, with about thirty to thirty-six inches between the double rows. Under dry farming conditions the rows are four to six feet apart, and the plants six to eight inches apart in the row. Beans are a good crop on summer fallow. They may be planted with a corn planter or with a regular bean planter; the small varieties are often planted with ordinary grain drills. Planting in hills ten to fifteen inches apart in the row is a common practice, with usually about three or four beans to the hill. Beans should be planted just deep enough to insure moisture for germination, which is usually about two inches.
