WRITER VISITS KLAMATH INDIANS

MRS. HARRIET CHALMERS ADAMS WHO SPENT MONTHS ON FRONT IN FRANCE, TELLS OF FRENCH CONDITIONS

A plea for France and the French women and children was heard by a number of Klamath Falls people who happened to meet and talk with Mrs. Harriet Chalmers Adams, of Washington, D. C., a noted writer and traveler who spent months in France along the French front near the lines.

"France needs help, and why should we not help her?" queries Mrs. Adams. "If France had not been sending her sons to the front to stem the tide of battle how much sooner would we have had to get into the trouble? How many more of our sons would die? Frankly, have not the French mothers been sacrificing their sons while ours have been safe at home?"

"The needs of the French people are great, and they are so self-sacrificing and united in their work that it is our duty to aid them, and aid them quickly," she said. "And did not France aid America when America cried for help. And those soldiers were not mercenaries, either, but sent here by the French government," said Mrs. Adams.

Although having viewed the awful suffering, devastation and sorrow caused by the European war, Mrs. Adams anxious for the United States to hurry and do her share in the great struggle for world freedom and democracy. When touched on the matter of atrocities committed by foreign soldiers she preferred to tell of the needs from a humanitarian standpoint and from a standpoint of present needs. Devastation, she did say, was everywhere, and so far as she could see was often committed by the German armies for naught but pure devastation, even the little articles about a house, such as knives, forks, dishes and all, even the houses, were wantonly destroyed by the retreating German forces on a systematized plan.

On her return from Europe Mrs. Adams spent considerable time lecturing on European conditions, which she accompanied with moving picture scenes of European battlefields and views.

"The French are noble and united. They have but one purpose, and they are willing to give up all else to accomplish that," she said. "In some respects," she said hesitatingly, "perhaps this war will do us some good. Would it not be wonderful to feel that we are of a united race, as France—a race with perfect unity instead of the great masses of people of which we are constituted. We are so large that it takes us time to move, and our powers are only being discovered."

Mrs. Adams was so close to the front several times that on yards separated her from the German lines, and often they had to find shelter in dug-outs and cellars, which, she says, are seldom if ever disturbed by shells. The people near the battle lines live in their cellars.

Only women and children, aged people and crippled soldiers convalescing are to be seen in French cities and towns, she said. A strange sight was to see the women working in the fields among bursting shells, with apparent little concern.

Mrs. Adams visited Klamath on a tour of the Indian reservations of the United States which she is making to view the actual conditions. She said the Klamaths seem to be prosperous and in good condition.

She left here by stage for Ashland, and then went to the Chemawa Indian school, and will return to the East and her home by way of Glacier National Park and other points.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Ten thousand Confederate veterans, remnants of the host that stormed the gates of the national capital more than fifty years ago, marched up Pennsylvania avenue yesterday in review before President Wilson.

Guards of honor from General Grant's army escorted the old Confederate soldiers, and the flags of the one-time two factions mingled together. "Call on us if the boys cannot do it," one group shouted as they passed the president.

A considerable business in such objects is said to take place daily at the frontier.

ing his right over the extended left arm of his opponent. This style of fighting has won for Leonard in most of his recent contests.
