Much damage to vegetable gardens at this time of the year is caused by over-irrigation. This warning to vegetable growers is made by Professor A. O. Bouquet of O. A. C., who states further that, "owing to the wet spring, there is now plenty of moisture in Western Oregon soils, and that irrigation is not necessary, except on coarse, sandy ground. They are further urged to examine the soil carefully before watering, for, although it may seem dry on the surface, there is still plenty of moisture at a depth of two or three inches. Where water is necessary, the best results are obtained if the irrigation is followed by a good cultivation as soon as the soil is in working condition.

In most cases cultivation is at present an efficient means of giving vegetables planted some weeks ago the necessary moisture, and the dry surface layer will prevent loss of water by evaporation. Cultivation enables the plant to get moisture in the most approved way, namely by taking it from below at the deep roots.

It is best not to cultivate the garden early in the morning, while the dew is on the leaves, for it will tend to make the plant more susceptible to disease, and the foliage will become dirty and the pores through which the plants breathe will be closed up.

ROMANIA WANTS REPRESENTATIVE HERE

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The department of state has informed the Rumanian government that it would be glad to receive here a Rumanian chargé d'affaires. This means the establishment of a Rumanian diplomatic mission in Washington.

Although this government has had a minister at Bucharest for many years, the Rumanians have never sent a diplomatic representative to this country. Recently the Rumanian government asked the government of the United States if the establishment of a legation here would be agreeable.
