Food Preparedness Campaign

OFFICIAL

Oregon Agricultural College Extension Service and United States Department of Agriculture Co-Operating

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, June 27.—Whole-sale injury to roots of cabbage and to radishes by a small white maggot is reported daily to the entomology department at O. A. C. Professor Lovett, entomologist at the Oregon experiment station discusses the pest and its control as follows:

"The adult of the cabbage and radish maggot is a small, brown, hump-backed fly, a little more than one-half the size of a housefly. These flies deposit eggs on the soil about the roots of cabbage and radish. These eggs hatch in from twenty to thirty-six hours into a small maggot, which bores its way into the roots of the plants.

"Screening of the permanent radish beds and of the cabbage seed beds to prevent the adult fly getting in to deposit eggs is the most satisfactory method of control. Regular window screen is excellent, or one may use a coarse grade of cheese cloth, running about 16 threads to the inch. The screen should be supported over a frame and the edges wrapped on the soil so as to make it fly-proof.

"For cabbage and cauliflower plants already set out, but not yet infested there is nothing better than the tarred felt discs. These should be cut about two inches across, with a slit running to the center. About 25 of them may be placed in a pile and a spike nail driven through the center to form a hole thru which the stem of the plant should run. These are placed about the plant and patted down close to the soil. Where the disks cannot be easily obtained, and in case of radishes where it is not possible to screen, use tobacco dust. A small amount of this material dusted on the soil around the plant will serve to repel the fly and prevent eggs being deposited. As tobacco dust is quite expensive, it may be mixed with an equal amount of wood ashes, air slaked lime or some similar dust.

"For plants already affected, there is nothing that is really satisfactory, but the following emulsion will kill many eggs and maggots: Crude carbolic acid, 1 pint; fish oil soap, 1 pound; water, 1 gallon.

"Cut the soap in fine shavings and dissolve in boiling water. Remove from the fire and add slowly the crude carbolic acid, stirring vigorously. Continue the vigorous agitation until an emulsion is formed. To one part of this stock emulsion add forty parts of water. This weak solution may be poured along the rows of radish plants or about the cabbage plants, using about a half pint to a cabbage plant. This same material will prevent infection by the maggot if used at eight-day intervals."

YOUNG OFFICER HAS RAPID RISE IN RANK

LONDON, June 27.—The present war has seen some rapid promotions among officers, but probably the most rapid is that of B. C. Freyberg, who, at the age of 28, has been gazetted temporary brigadier general.

Born in New Zealand, Freyberg was twice wounded in Gallipoli, where he won the distinguished service order for swimming ashore in the Gulf of Saros and was mentioned in dispatches dealing with the evacuation of that place.

He won the Victoria Cross when leading the naval brigade at Beaulieu last November, was wounded four times during that battle, and was injured during the operations at Antwerp.

FARMER ARTILLERY MAN REWARDED FOR INVENTION

TOULON, France, June 27.—Jos. Fenouil, a farmer of Sallans, has just received the military medal for inventing a means for regulating the aim of cannon. Fenouil, an adjutant in the 110th artillery, developed unsuspected technical knowledge at the front. His invention has been adopted by the army.

CONTORTIONIST LEGLESS UNTIL DISCOVERED

PARIS, June 27.—A contortionist out of an engagement, has lived for several months by imposing upon charitable people as a legless civilian victim of the German invasion of Belgium.

He pretended to be a Belgian military chaplain, captured by the Germans at Liege and taken to Germany, when he awoke one morning to find that both legs had been amputated, though he had not been wounded. He lived on the sympathies that his story inspired, until at Dijon recently it was discovered that his two legs were intact.

WOMEN ACCEPT STANDARD FORMS

NEVER BEFORE WOULD THEY ACCEPT STANDARD DRESS OR UNIFORMS AS NOW, SAYS LONDON DESIGNER

LONDON, June 10.—(Correspondence)—There has never been a time when women were more willing to accept standard dress or uniforms than they are at present.

That is the most marked effect of the war upon women's dress. All uniforms have acquired dignity in women's eyes. The housemaid does not object to the cap and apron badge of servitude, the worker in the bank dons an overall cheerfully, women in various organizations wear their khaki, the Red Cross and volunteer aid workers are proud of their uniforms.

An expert designer, discussing these changes, says:

"There always will be the women who want frilleries, the women who try to insist upon something quite different from the style of the moment, but nowadays their number is greatly diminished. The uniform idea has arrived. It may mean the total extinction of dressmaking as a creative art, but there will be development on other lines.

"There has never been a great war which has not influenced fashion in a picturesque or even gruesome fashion, and this world war has done its share. We had a fashion adapted as a compliment to each ally, the Russian caps and tunics, the Bersagliere hats of the Italian soldiers, and the Serbian colors. Scotch plaids have given the Parisiennes great joy. "Khaki shades are in vogue for spring and summer costumes, and the blue-gray, with touches of crimson, of the French uniforms is seen here and there."

MEXICAN OFFICERS FORM AS PRIVATES

MEXICO CITY, June 27.—As there are now many more corporals and sergeants than are needed in the Mexican army, those in excess of the required number will be formed into special regiments and battalions serving as privates, but with the same pay as they now receive. This force will be known as the Legion of Honor, and will be commanded by officers who have distinguished themselves during the campaign of the last four years.

SENATE AGREES ON AMENDMENTS

ACTION IS EXPECTED TO PREVENT DELAY IN FOOD LEGISLATION AND ACTION BY SENATE ON FOOD CONTROL BILL

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27.—The senate agricultural committee has agreed upon an amendment to the government's food control bill to extend the government's control to iron, steel, petroleum, farm implements, home products and other amendments agreed on to provide a bill which shall not apply to farmers, gardeners, stockraisers and to products raised on the owners' land.

The bill shall not give the food administrator power to impose individual rations or regulate meals, is another amendment agreed on. These amendments will remove much opposition to the food bill.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

IT'S GRANDMOTHER'S RECIPE TO BRING BACK COLOR AND LUSTER TO HAIR

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

How the Red Cross Counts Subscriptions

In its campaign to raise $100,000,000 the Red Cross, under the direction of H. P. Davison, partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., who loaned him for the work, used this novel method of advertising in New York city the progress of its national effort. The photograph here taken shows the barrel on Fifth avenue at Eleventh street, near the First Presbyterian church, an historic old structure built in 1845, when the subscriptions amounted to $11,000,000. The next day the barrel was moved to Thirty-fifth street, and it continued its journey toward One Hundredth street rapidly.

Under the Sign of the Red Cross in France.

The Red Cross in France, with Aid of the American Red Cross, Has Helped Send These Departing Men Back to the Trenches with Smiling Hearts.

By Mavis Bonnell Davis (As a volunteer in France, Mrs. Davis got vivid impressions of the part America's great humanitarian agency has played and is to play in the world war.)

In the money that is pouring out to meet the demand of the American Red Cross for $100,000,000 there are memorials, devotions, tributes.

The sign of the Red Cross, to one who has worked under it, calls up countless images. Sometimes it is old shoes—shoes so old that they let in the mud and water of the trenches. The owners, coming in on stretchers and in stockinged feet, guard them protectively, thinking they must do duty again. How many processions there are of pale faces and old shoes. Sometimes an image that comes to one woman is a giant negro, John Brown, from Texas, whom she found in a French hospital. John Brown had come over to France as a groom to several hundred cavalry horses.

Arrived there, he said he thought "It was up to him to do his bit." He joined the "Foreign Legion, fought bravely and was severely wounded.

Very often the image is of a patriotic woman, wearing the Red Cross on her arm, performing the humblest services for other privates carrying their poor shoes for other negroes sharing the agony of the fight—the Cingaleses. The Red Cross bag lying from the schoolhouse that is now a hospital in the main street of the village that looks so sound asleep without its men; the emblem on the arm of a surgeon working miracles of science on shattered bodies; that red badge on the cases of relief supplies unloaded at the docks; on the sides of motor ambulances; over canteens where homeless soldiers lay asleep; over the shelter for children—the sign multiplies into myriad banners.

In every civilized country now men and women and children are pouring out gifts of money and service to the Red Cross. In every civilized country the ones at home look up to it with comfort and with hope and daily growing devotion as the young go out to fight.

Cramps!

Says Mrs. Frank Hager, of Corvallis, Ill.: "I was suffering terrible cramps and pains each month. I had used... but it didn't give any permanent relief. The pains came back on me just the same as before... After taking Cardui, I was entirely relieved from the pains, and have never been bothered with them since."
