Preparedness Prevails at Portland N. E. A. Meeting

PORTLAND, July 7.—Portland is crowded with educators from all parts of the United States here to attend the 1917 convention of the National Education Association, which opens here today, and will continue all next week. Association officials predict 10,000 delegates will attend. Held in a war year, with all its attendant anxieties to do their "bit" towards furthering the national cause, the convention program has been built around the general subjects of preparedness, nationalism and patriotism. Speakers will expound the nation's ideals and tell how educators can help in the country's war tasks.

Twenty departmental branches of the association will hold separate meetings during the week to deal with as many divisions of school work, and fourteen educational and scholastic organizations will convene at the same time. Every afternoon and evening during the next week will be held the general sessions of the convention.

While the convention opened today with sessions by one subsidiary organization, the National Council, the general sessions will not begin until Monday.

Governor James Withycombe of Oregon, Mayor George L. Baker of Portland, Superintendent of Schools L. R. Alderman of Portland, and W. R. Foster of Reed College, Portland, are to deliver addresses of welcome to the delegates at the first general session Monday afternoon. C. H. Keys, president of the Skidmore School of Arts, Saratoga Springs, New York, will respond on behalf of the convention delegates.

Governor Ernest Lister of Washington is also to talk Monday afternoon. His subject, it is believed, will concern patriotism and Americanism. The annual address of the president of the association, Robert J. Aley, president of the University of Maine, Orono Me., is on the program for Monday.

GERMAN NEGLECT PUT ON ENGLAND

RESULTS OF FAMINE IN FORMER GERMAN PROVINCE ARE NOW BLAMED TO MISMANAGEMENT OF ENGLISH

(Correspondence)

LONDON, June 26.—In reply to some remarkable stories of British mistreatment of natives in German West Africa, which have been circulated by the German wireless, an official statement of the situation in that district has been given to the Associated Press. It declares that whatever sufferings have been endured by the natives of Ovamboland were due, not to British mistreatment, but to the neglect of the German government prior to British occupation, and gives some details of the work of restoration and reconstruction which the British undertook as soon as they came into possession.

The most recent German wireless communication on this subject was issued on May 30, and said in part:

"Terribly critical conditions have been created in German West Africa owing to the occupation of that country by the English. A missionary writes to a South African mission paper: 'In the Ovambo country the horrors of war were followed by even greater horrors of famine. Now and then the country has been visited before by similar afflictions, but the German government took care to prevent suffering by helpful precautions so that the afflictions never reached extreme severity. After the English came, these precautions were neglected, and hunger was able to ravage the unfortunate country without mercy. Thousands of natives have fallen victims to English neglect and mismanagement.'

The facts as established by reports from the governor general of South Africa, illustrate the reckless falsehood of the German official statements. The British reply is as follows:

"The territory of Ovamboland was included within the borders of the German protectorate of Southwest Africa, but was always left severely alone by the German administration. The events referred to in the wireless reports occurred in 1915, and were directly due to the neglect of the German protectorate to take precautions against famine.

"Owing to a succession of droughts, want began to make itself felt in Ovamboland in 1913, and the famine culminated in a total failure of the crops in the beginning of 1915.

"Immediately after the surrender of the German forces at Tsumeb in July, 1915, the starving Ovambos, who hitherto had been shut in Ovamboland by the German troops operating directly between them and the Union forces, commenced to stream south out of Ovamboland in search of succor, which had been denied them by the Germans. Over 7,000 Ovambos reached our posts in northern districts, and were immediately placed in hospitals and depots, and everything possible done to nurse them back to health and strength.

"Within two months of our occupation of the protectorate, a large fleet of motor lorries had been organized to convey food to Ovamboland, and to succor those who had been unable to come south, and relief measures were in full operation. Our officers distributed large quantities of foodstuffs, and relief parties were organized to assist straggling Ovambos on the road. These measures were carried out in the face of enormous difficulties of transport, and in addition to the heavy task of feeding our own people in the northern part of the protectorate under abnormal conditions.

"It cannot be emphasized too strongly that long prior to the British occupation of Ovamboland a famine had existed there to an intense degree, nor can it be doubted for a moment that the German protectorate government is wholly to blame for the neglect to assist the Ovambos during the years of 1913 and 1914 and the first six months of 1915."

Hints for Saving Sugar in Fruit Canning

Watch the use of sugar in jelly making and save wherever possible, says today's bulletin from the National Emergency Food and Garden Commission, which is co-operating with the Evening Herald in a nation wide campaign to conserve the food of the nation and against waste. The commission will send free its canning or drying manual to any who enclose a two cent stamp to pay postage.

Sugar is costly, continues the bulletin, and every housewife should use great care with it. In order to tell just how much sugar should be used with each kind of juice, place a teaspoonful of juice in a glass and add one spoonful of 95 per cent grain al-cobol. Shake the glass gently, in order to mix, then pour slowly and watch how the pectin—that is the substance in fruits that makes them jelly—is precipitated. If the precipitation is in one lump, a cup of sugar may be used for each of juice. Should the precipitation be in several lumps the sugar should be three-fourths the amount of juice.

Should no precipitation be shown the juice is not adapted to jelly making, and should be used with apple or juices rich in pectin.

Tasting the juice is a good idea, because the housewife will find fruit not as acid as good tart apples do not make good jelly unless they are mixed with fruits which are acid.

PORTAL AUTHORITIES

REDUCE PETTY THEIVING

LONDON, July 7.—The postoffice authorities have found a way to reduce the large number of thefts of silks, satins and other articles of women's finery that followed the employment of thousands of women as letter carriers and sorters in the post-offices of the country. They transferred the handling of these articles back to the men, and the thefts at once ceased.

OIL COMPANIES WOULD

ERECT WIRELESS STATIONS

MEXICO, CITY, July 7.—Oil companies operating in the vicinity of Tampico have petitioned the government to be allowed to erect and operate wireless stations for conducting their business. The petition is under consideration, but it is said that if it is granted, it will be on condition that the stations be under government control and manned by government operators.
