Moving Pictures

The character known as the "Blue Streak," a dissipated youth, is cast out by his father. He goes West and becomes a train robber. He and his men enter a saloon just as a gambler is to wed the proprietor's daughter. The "Streak" shoots up the place and kidnaps the girl. At a mountain cabin the "Streak" relents, and finds himself in love with her. When the sheriff comes he refuses to flee. The girl rushes to his arms and lifting the girl up behind him the "Streak" dashes off. He returns to his father with his bride, a new man. At the Star tonight.

Uncle Sam Overcoming The Submarine Menace

The Loss of Ships Has Been Materially Reduced By the Convoy System Which is Now Followed By the Government. Many U. Boats Are Believed Sunk

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1.—American naval forces are conveying merchant craft across the Atlantic, it has been disclosed officially at the navy department, and examination of the records show that the loss of convoyed ships by submarines has averaged less than one-half of one per cent.

Details of the convoy system are withheld. It was stated, however, that American war vessels are regularly escorting fleets of British and French or other allied merchantmen across, the protection being supplemented when the danger zone is reached by the destroyers and other patrol craft.

American naval officials believe that an effective system for checking the submarine menace is being built up gradually, but certainly. Many devices and many methods enter into the task. Among other things, depth bombs are proving effective. Official reports indicate that the American destroyers have accounted for several U boats with these weapons. No announcement of such incidents will be made, however, unless absolute proof of the fact is available.

No U boat has been captured by the Americans. It is the best judgment of high officials, however, that several have been sunk by Admiral Sims' destroyers and they are confident that the submarine menace will be substantially abated as the number of destroyers and other available craft for the work is increased. Reports from London that the submarines are working now farther at sea than formerly, were confirmed by the navy department. It may be that new boats of greater size and better sea-keeping qualities lead to this extension of the zone of activities, but it is regarded as more probable that the increasing vigilance of the anti-submarine forces is mainly responsible.
