

TRAIN SERVICE TO OLENE VERY SOON

STRAHORN ROAD SURVEY IS CHANGED

WILL TAKE HIGHER ELEVATION AT OLENE

Excellent Progress is Being Made in Pine Flat District and Dairy Terminal—Starhorn Builds County Road Near Dairy—Rock Cut Twenty-Eight Feet Deep at Pine Flat Summit Almost Completed.

Klamath County folk are now gladdened by the daily sight of the locomotive and track laying outfit well out toward the middle of the valley between here and Olene.

The track has reached the main canal beyond Altamont, which, being on high ground, enables the residents of the country for miles around to glimpse the smoke of the first iron horse of the new Strahorn railroad.

A bridge 200 feet long crossing the canal will hold up track laying for about a week. Meantime the large amount of heavy material required for the structure is being hauled out over the newly laid rails, and the track men are surfacing the line for permanent use.

Closely following are the fence contractors, who have the forty miles job of fencing the right of way to Dairy. This requires two carloads of wire and about 15,000 cedar posts. First class road crossings, crossing signs and cattle guard are promptly installed to reduce the annoyance so often apparent in railway construction, to the minimum.

Beyond the canal crossing the grade is ready for the rails for about six miles, with the exception of about one-third of a mile over the divide at the Van Brimmer place, where a temporary track will be laid, over which the steam shovel loads can carry the material to fill the few hundred feet of line in the tules just east of the Southern Pacific crossing.

West of the Southern Pacific crossing within the city limits, the big steam dredge of the Sawmill Engineering and Construction company is piling up the grade for the remaining three-fourths of a mile along the north shore of Lake Ewauna to the terminal at the intersection of Klamath.

OREGON LOAN QUOTA RAISED

FIVE BILLION TO BE RAISED INSTEAD OF THREE—STATE'S QUOTA WILL BE TWENTY-FOUR MILLION INSTEAD OF SIXTEEN

PORTLAND, Oct. 6.—Oregon's expected quota of $16,500,000 for the Liberty Loan bonds has been raised to $24,000,000, according to information received today from the secretary of the treasury.

Instead of an issue of $3,000,000,000, which is the minimum of the amount actually needed, it is expected that $5,000,000,000 will be subscribed, and under this expectation the Pacific Coast district is expected to contribute $350,000,000, instead of $210,000,000, as originally announced.

The enlarged quota for Klamath County has not been announced, but its amount will be forwarded as soon as it is released from the federal reserve representative at Portland, which will probably be next Monday.
