As an attraction extraordinary, Manager Houston announces his engagement of the new Mary Pickford picture, "The Little American," conceded to be the greatest patriotic message ever seen on the motion picture screen. Staged under the personal direction of that master of scenecraft, Cecil B. DeMille, creator of "Joan the Woman," this production, it is generally felt, surpasses even the wonderful achievement of that masterpiece. Popularly known as "America's Sweetheart," Miss Pickford presents a particularly fitting characterization in the title role of this new Artcraft picture. Presenting a story of especial timely theme by Mr. De Mille and Jeanie Macpherson, this production, it is promised, will bring home most effectively, conditions involving the present great war. Stirring views of remarkably spectacular war scenes, both on land and sea, are pictured in the most modern manner of photoplay technique.

As Angela Moore, the little American girl who braves the dangers of the war zones, "Our Mary" appears in what is readily thought to be the greatest dramatic effort of her career. In scenes that demand much of her histrionic finesse she offers a portrayal that is unlike anything hitherto given to the screen by this famous little actress.

In the production of "The Little American," various well known authorities on conditions evidenced across the ocean, have collaborated with De Mille, with the result that even the most minute detail has been
