KLAMATH MAN GETS UP NEW MOVIE IDEA

Terwilliger has fixed a U shaped wedge in the core of the spool. As one reel of the film is finished he clips it off with a pair of scissors. He then pulls the lower reel out and inserts the empty spool, grabs the strings coming down from above, he places this against the core of the spool holding it with his finger in the wedge out out. The reel is then started and although a few feet are wound on backwards after the first whirl around, the film is caught and the program in front goes on interrupted. The thing is amazingly simple considering its importance and will be a tremendous saving in the expense of operators who wish to run a "no-wait" show. Terwilliger has just been granted a patent on another idea by which the focus of the picture on the screen is equalized, bringing the lines on the edge into as clear a relief as the center.
