

At the Theaters

Some of the big scenes in "Blue Jeans," Viola Dana's forthcoming Metro special production of Joseph Arthur's famous play, occur in an old-fashioned sawmill. These scenes were taken at Roslyn, Long Island. This mill, built in 1889, is still in use by the original owners, Conklin and Tubby, who watched with great interest the taking of the scenes with Miss Dana as star. Powerful lights were installed at the mill for the photographing of the tense scenes staged there. The circular saw, four and a half feet in diameter, which has done service six days a week for over two score years, was used in the great rescue scene. At the Orpheus tonight.

VIOLA DANA in "BLUE JEANS"

Wm. S. Hart, the Thos. H. Ince star, in his newest Artercraft picture, "Wolves of the Rail," at the Star tonight, performs a feat that eclipses any "thriller" heretofore seen on the screen. To prevent a locomotive from crashing into a train loaded with soldiers, he gallops madly along the onrushing engine, swings himself into the engine-cab, throws the reverse lever, and brings the locomotive to a standstill. In making this scene Hart was compelled to do without the usual rehearsals and to ride a horse that was new to motion picture work and "engine shy."

The "Flames of Chance," which will appear at the Temple Sunday and Monday, is an adaptation of "The Three Godsons of Jeanette Gontreau," by Francis W. Sullivan, which appeared in the Ladies Home Journal. In this picture are exposed to what extent German ingenuity will go to aid the Kaiser in his war against the world and democracy.
