FILM STAR MAKES

HIT IN "THE SPY"

How a young American society man whose "greatest ambition is to tie the perfect dress tie" is chosen for the hazardous undertaking of securing the list of German spies in Berlin, was graphically portrayed with Dustin Farnum in "The Spy" at the Orpheus theater last night. Though successful in delivering the list to the American ambassador in Berlin, he is captured and pays the penalty of a spy rather than tell where the list is, thereby proving himself a true and loyal American even to death.

"Parentage," a big special production, which will make its debut at the Star theater tonight, is the realization of a big idea, which came to Hobart Henie about two years ago, when he was doing his work before the camera as a star. He believed that a picture showing the effect of parents' lives on their children offered a tremendous scope for photodrama, and if given the proper treatment should prove an artistic as well as a financial success.

He continued working in pictures as an actor, but this was the predominant thought in his mind, and he believed that eventually the day would come when he would have an opportunity of seeing his ambitions realized: when he would take his place among the foremost directors of his time.

Recently that moment came, when he was authorized to make a big feature. The story was left entirely up to him. It was one of the happiest moments of his life. He sat down and wrote the story. When it came to choosing his cast, he was particular to choose players who seemed to be fitted naturally for the various types he wished portrayed. The result has been that he has a most unusual list of characters, who seem to be particularly adapted for the roles they enact.

For three months he worked on this feature, with the result that he has given superb proof of the need of such independent, unhampered production work. For "Parentage" is a wonderful story, and presents more big vital thoughts which hit hard and ring true, than any other thought picture ever made. It is technically delightful, distinctly human, and particularly clean, while the story is about folks we meet every day in ordinary life, and might be you, or me, or our neighbors.

Are you saving for yourself alone or buying War Savings Stamps and saving for yourself and your country?
