

SOLDIER DRESS IS FREQUENTLY UNSEASONABLE

BEHIND BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, July 30.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—The soldier has little or no choice in clothing, and the condition of campaigning are such that soldiers are seldom ideally dressed. The changes of temperature that Western Europe can experience in 48 hours completely baffle anyone who possesses a restricted wardrobe and who is obliged to live in the open. Yet the soldier in France must be prepared for anything in the line of weather.

In the British army, the seasons are regulated by official routine rather than by any slavish adherence to climate. The first signs of spring are Army Orders commanding that all "special heavy" winter clothing, such as trench coats, furs and sweaters, shall be handed in by April 1. And handed in these comforts duly are, whereupon the weather forthwith turns wintry again and the middle of April is perhaps marked by a three days' blizzard and sharp frost.

Garment by garment the winter clothing disappears into the storehouse—sweaters, winter shirts, trench gloves and mittens, leather coats—all inexorably return to the Ordnance Department. During the summer this clothing is cleaned, repaired, sterilized and repacked in bales ready for the succeeding autumn and winter issue.

The clothes collected are replaced by issues of lighter stuff, more suitable for warm weather wear. For in the summer, fighting is hot work, and gunners prefer to serve their guns in knee-length underdrawers and a shirt. During some battles in the hottest days the men have stripped even farther than this, and worked bare to the waist as their grandfathers served the guns in Nelson's day.

Wool and flannel seem heavy stuff for summer wear, but the British army is old in experience and knows the best all-round materials. Cotton, though excellent for comfort, is said to swell the sick-lists rapidly, for when soaked through with perspiration it dries in such a way as to chill the wearer, while the heavier wool, though less pleasant to wear, dries without ill effect.

The same standard outer uniform serves the British soldier for all seasons in France. One article that is the same for British soldiers in all parts of the world and in all climates is the regulation grey army sock. Experience has proved to the satisfaction of the British authorities that this standard sock is the best for all conditions of marching. It does not shrink or get hard from repeated washing, and it is extraordinary durable.

British army clothing may not be handsome or even well cut, but it is most carefully designed to furnish the maximum of practical use combined with the first hygienic qualities. The best testimony to its excellent quality and design is the fact that the soldier himself acknowledges that "ration clothes" are the best that can be found for army wear.

RATS PROVE ENEMY OF SOLDIERS

BEHIND BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, Aug. 10.—An enemy whose activities do not figure in the official reports but against which Allied soldiers wage daily warfare is the rat. Tens of thousands of rats, huge, sharp-fanged fighters, have dug themselves in among the billets and trenches in France and Flanders and they are a constant torment. Thanks to modern medical science, there has been little or no disease communicated by the rodents.

Rats multiply rapidly in the trenches and thrive well. They steal the soldiers' rations, disturb his rest and spitefully bite him when he offers resistance. The pest is hunted

MEDICAL SCHOOL FOR SOLDIERS' REFORMATION

CAE PMAY, N. J., Aug. 10.—The first army medical school for the reconstruction of defects of hearing and speech of soldiers has been opened here under the division of physical reconstruction of the surgeon-general's office. It is a part of Army Hospital No. 11, located in what was formerly a luxurious hotel built by a syndicate. Lieutenant Colonel Charles W. Richardson of the army medical corps is the director of the school which is said to be the first of its kind in the world.

Returned soldiers with hearing destroyed or impaired, or suffering from partial or total loss of speech are to be educated physically and vocationally.

The school opened with a full corps of teachers and enough patients to occupy their time.

Lieutenant Colonel Richardson, who came here to establish the school, is professor of laryngology and otology in the George Washington University. He joined the army when this country entered the war.

PEACE BRINGS RUN SUBJECTS TO GERMANY

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The conclusion of peace between Germany and Ukraine, Russia, Finland and Roumania has been followed by a large influx into Germany from those countries of German Russians, according to the Wolff Bureau, the German official agency. For the systematic regulation of the immigration which is expected to continue, a new imperial immigration bureau has been organized.

with ferrets, terriers, poison and traps, and when particularly numerous given a gas attack. After the trenches are drenched with gas, they are generally clear of rats for a long period.

ACTIVE WORK SAVES MINDS OF SOLDIERS

BEHIND BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, Aug. 10.—Neither fatigue duty nor working parties are popular with the soldier but they serve a great purpose because in modern war man's greatest enemy is likely to be his own imagination. In the heat of action he has no time for thought. But later, when the excitement has died away, the reaction sets in, and a realization of the past begins to depress and deaden his vitality, for the memories of a modern battle are more terrible than the actual experience.

The only antidote to this depression lies in action and activity. Action provides distraction for the mind. It is this that the working party supplies, and in spite of the generally abusive terms applied to it by the soldier, it is really doing him a service.

It is the British soldier's historic privilege to complain, or "grouse," as he calls it. But his complaints must not be taken to indicate a state of low morale. Exactly the reverse, for it is an unwritten law in the British army that a man may complain only when things are going well. In danger and adversity there is no complaining, only that dogged determination which makes the British soldier such a formidable opponent.
