

FRENCH SOLDIERS ADVANCING IN THE NEW STYLE OF OPEN WARFARE

This is one of the first photographs of the new methods of open warfare. It is, however, practiced by the French differently from the Germans, who advance in solid formation. The French string out like Americans were taught for many years after the civil war.

UNCLE SAM NOW GIANT WHOLESALER

NOTED AUTHOR TELLS OF INDESCRIBABLE PILE OF STORES AND SUPPLIES AT TITANIC PARIS HARBOR

(By Clarence Huntington Kelland) PARIS, Aug 10.—(By Mail)—Uncle Sam is in the wholesale business raised to the nth power. I have just seen one of his commissary depots and my eyes are still bulging with the bigness of it all.

This establishment of Uncle Sam's cannot be figured by so many feet of floor space, as in the usual store. You have to think of it in units of acres, almost of miles. Just stop and consider that fifty miles of railroad, in intricate network, are required to take care of this one depot and you will get some notion of its gigantic proportions.

One stands on a nearby hill and gazes, not at a building but at a panorama. Building after building are stretched almost as far as the eye can reach. They are no toy buildings. The day was hot and when I had walked from one end to the other of just one building I was ready for a rest. It must have been half a mile long. There were not two nor three, but literally a dozen of these and the buildings were not enough to house all the stock that Uncle Sam keeps there.

Out on the ground, carefully covered by tarpaulins, were hillocks and mounds of boxes and crates. Further along were mountain ranges of baled hay. It seemed as if there were enough hay there to feed all the army horses and mules in the world until they reached a ripe old age. There were piles of bags containing fodder that might have been heaped into a Woolworth building.

As we passed upon the open doors of a warehouse the variety and quantity of its contents amazed us. First we passed tons upon tons of tobacco, piled to the roof. Smoking there, we thought, for a million men until the Hun is driven back to Berlin. Next was canned sweet corn. It looked as if the entire crop of Iowa was in that one place. Then macaroni by the ton upon ton. Next was shovel heads—enough of them to dig trenches from the sea to Switzerland. Next canvas, garbage receptacles, cooling pails, picks, stoves, stove pipes, water pails, all sorts of food stuffs, and hardware and supplies.

Back in America we heard folks complaining that America was not on the job. If those kickers could come to France and see what the army had done here in less than a year, it would go home more content. It would go home with chest expanded and chin up to brag about the ability of America to meet an emergency.

For here a city, apparently permanent, has sprung up. Just to operate these warehouses and railroad yards, thousands of men are required.

Their barracks form a good sized town. There are mess halls and officers quarters. There are congregating places for the men, notably a number of huge Y. M. C. A. huts. There is the Allies hut which serves English, French and Americans; there is a hut exclusively for the colored laborers; there is an officers' club, operated by the "Y" with canteen, billiard table, lounge and other comforts; and there are two enormous huts for the enlisted men, with room to seat in each upwards of seven hundred and fifty. These are provided with a piano, phonographs, canteens, libraries and young Y. M. C. A. women are on the job and know just how to talk to the Amer boys.

The "Y" woman in a permanent camp like this is a great institution. She gets acquainted. She sews on buttons; she chats with the boys and they come to her with their tales of woe. Because she can be impersonal, and have an interest in each and every one of them, her influence is amazing. The mere fact of a woman being there is fine. It holds the boys to the scratch. She even affects their personal appearance. Here are four young women, shut off from the world, the only women in a camp containing thousands of men. And they are having the time of their lives. Many more are needed for the jobs, and America must supply them.

These places are the social center, and give the social life to the commissary town. It needs some relaxation, some place to go, for it is a remarkably busy and hard working place. Daily huge trains come in with loads to be stored, other huge trains come in to be loaded with supplies for the front. Nobody has a minute to loaf.

Back home a business, a wholesale house, which required, let us say, five thousand men, just to handle its warehouses, would be some concern. Over here, we are told, this is not even the largest of Uncle Sam's depots. It looks to a man as if the United States meant business in this war, and was making preparations to stay right here until the Hun was disposed of for good and all. Anyhow that is what the boys in khaki will tell you.

RAINS OVER STATE HELP LATE CROPS

PORTLAND, Aug. 23—Light to heavy rains were helpful to late crops last week but retarded work in some localities, according to the weekly summary of crop condition in Oregon prepared by the weather bureau here. Work was hindered particularly in northern counties, where it was also too cold during the latter part of the week for best results. A light frost in Wallowa county caused slight damage.

Winter wheat harvest is practically completed in all except the more elevated districts and thrashing is progressing rapidly where not delayed by rains and damp weather. Fair to good yields are reported from the principal wheat producing counties, while the yields of rye are only poor to good. The quality of barley is fair to good with very light yields. The harvest of oats and spring wheat is now general and thrashing is under way, with yields below the average. Corn was greatly benefitted by recent rains and made excellent growth. The ears appear to be well formed and are filling nicely, with prospects for a very good crop in most sections.

Meadows are very much improved by showers and the growth of grass was started in some pastures. The second crop of alfalfa is being cut in Baker, Klamath, Malheur and Wallowa counties and the third crop is about ready for harvest in Josephine and Umatilla counties. Pastures continue to furnish poor grazing but cattle as a rule, are showing up fairly well under adverse conditions. Stock are being brought from summer range in Jackson County.

The tonnage of Bartlett pears was not up to the average in Jackson and Josephine counties, but a heavy crop of good quality is being gathered in Lane county. Rain and cool weather are permitting fruit to continue developing, otherwise late varieties dropping considerable in some orchards but indications point to a very good crop.

Late potatoes will undoubtedly receive some benefit from the recent rains but the early crop was too far advanced to be helped. The moisture, however, will improve the condition of late gardens and other truck crops, which were greatly in need of rain.

YANKEES CALL OUT FIRE DEPARTMENT

LONDON, Aug. 23.—A group of American soldiers called out the fire department of the borough of Westminster the other day under the mistaken notion that the House of Commons was on fire.

The soldiers, sight seeing in the neighborhood of the Houses of Parliament, were startled by the sight of smoke emerging from the Clock Tower, just underneath the face of Big Ben. One of them promptly sent in a telephone call for the firemen.

The cause of the commotion, it seems, was simple. A fire is kept burning in the base of the Tower to maintain an even temperature in the works of the clock.

WORK ON ROAD TO SAW MILL HAS STARTED

Work on the new road to Pelican City has now commenced according to report, with a crew of men under C. D. Wilson. Wilson's work on the rocky grade around Modoc Point last summer has received much favorable comment and he has been selected to start the new important highway. It is expected that filling the low place in the grade just outside the city limits, will be the first work undertaken.

PENDLETON ROUNDUP STAGED NEXT MONTH

Big preparations are being made for the annual roundup this year at Pendleton September 19, 20 and 21. The net proceeds of this affair which has proved such a drawing card over the country for a number of years, are to be donated this year to the Red Cross.

Lee Caldwell, the 1916 champion, is now fighting in France, and a large number of other participants are likewise engaged, but there are enough left for the best kind of a show. It is believed, and when staged for so worthy a cause there is little doubt but that it will be a huge success.
