ARMY OF WOMEN REPLACE MEN BEHIND LINES

BEHIND THE LINES IN FRANCE. Aug. 28.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Within one month 1000 members of the Women's Army Auxiliary corps will be enrolled in the United States army service corps. Three hundred are already at work here in the offices, laundries, and service of the American Expeditionary Forces. They will supplant an equal number of able bodied youths who will leave to take their places in fighting units. The valiant service that these "Waacs" have given in the British army recommended their adoption by the United States staff and as many as can be spared are being transferred to the United States service to relieve some men for duty nearer the front. The British "Waacs" are thoroughly military, being organized on military lines. The corps is officered with regular ranks corresponding to the army and the same insignia as army officers is worn. The barracks of the "Waacs" is said to present a model in military precision. In addition, 4000 French girls are being engaged in the salvage depots to supplant the fighting men.

NOTICE

A speaker from the East who represents the Ministerial Relief and Sustentation board, will speak at the First Presbyterian church of this city Sunday morning. Then in the afternoon he will speak at 4 o'clock in the Mt. Laki church, and in the evening he will be heard at the Presbyterian church in Merrill at eight o'clock. This is an especially fine speaker, comes well recommended and the message he brings should be of interest to the people of any community.

GOVERNMENT SCHOOL FOR ARMY COOKS

FORT WORTH, Tex. Sept. 6.—Nine hundred skilled cooks, trained for overseas duty, have been graduated in classes of 300 from the government school for cooks and bakers, the largest school of its kind in the country which is being conducted at Camp Bowie here under command of Captain Fred H. Morrell. Students graduating must reach the following standard: Practical work, 50 per cent; recitation and theory, 20 per cent; care of kitchen, 15 per cent; discipline, 15 per cent. The majority of those graduated have taken from the course for second cooks, with first cooks next in number and mess sergeants third. The course includes and instruction on rations, bills of fare, component parts, field specifications, preparation, sanitation, temperatures, mess management, stock sheets, field cooking, recipes and visits to the packing houses here. An understanding of food values most needed to suit conditions existing in various places is being drilled into the students. Great attention also is given to food conservation. The army must not waste and cooks are taught to throw all particles of meat and bone into a 20 gallon pot where the mixture is boiled and the fat rendered. The stock is then used for gravies and soups. Some companies here require the men to weigh what is left on their plates and the amount is deducted from the next meal, thus adjusting the food needed to their appetites. The sanitation course requires the mess officers to keep kitchen, mess hall, refrigerators, ovens and cooking utensils hygienically clean. This applies to tables and floors. How to set the tables is an important part of the study. Experiments are conducted to devise means of using substitutes for flour as oatmeal, cornmeal, and rice flour. Use of sirup instead of sugar where possible is encouraged. "Food wastage," said Captain Morrell, "is not always the fault of the soldier at the mess table. The cook is often to blame. If he doesn't cook the food right, it will be distasteful to the men and they will refuse to eat all set before them. The well cooked meal puts the men in good spirits as well as helping them physically." A record of food conservation was kept at the detention camp where the recruits are quartered and fed under the direction of Captain Morrell. Of 72,179 pounds of flour allowed the camp in fourteen days only 36,185 pounds were used and yet every man had all the bread he desired.
