FOURTH LOAN MUST BE OVERSUBSCRIBED

Had the Civil War ended at Bull Run we might now perhaps be living in the United States of California, or Oregon or Washington.

Had the present great war been finished at the Marne in 1914, or at Mons, all Germany by this time would have ridden down Fall Mall Strauss in rubber-neck wagons gliding over the pitiable Haglender-schwein writing under the German yoke.

Had the war ended the other day at St. Mihiel, Germany would still be in possession of the richest parts of France.

The war is not yet won! In every great war in history, final victory has dated from some sense of carnage so terrible in its dimension that the losing side could not recover.

Despite the terrible loss of life in any one of a dozen battles of the present war, on the Russian front, at Verdun, at Cambrai, the Marne, each side has at length regained its stride and continued the combat.

Now Germany has lost Bulgaria, and may lose Turkey as its ally. But still the loss of fighting men to its ranks is not so great as that suffered by the allies when Russia went down in the bolshevik slough.

Germany is still a virile, cunning, and desperately determined foe. Having abandoned now her dreams of world conquest, she will fight the more viciously for a favorable peace.

She will not yield up the unconditional surrender the allies will demand until her armies have been absolutely ground beneath the allied armies' heels.

Marshal Foch and General March tell us that this cannot come to pass until America has swelled its armies in France to the 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 planned for next spring.

The present is no time for America to sit back in complacent laziness and neglect the most vigorous prosecution of every detail of the war. The Fourth Liberty Loan must not only be subscribed—it must be substantially over-subscribed, that Germany may read that America is still ruthless in its determination to wipe out all militaristic dreams of a German over-lordship of the world. Have YOU gone YOUR limit in your subscription to Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds?

HUNS EATING EVERYTHING BUT FOOD

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Adulteration of food and profiteering from the sale of substitutes for food have become a plague in Germany. This statement is made by The Chemical Institute of Leipzig and is published in the Berlin Tageblatt.

Dr. Roehrig, writing the report for the institute, said the mineralizing of food-stuffs was increasing. Gypsum and chalk are used to adulterate flour, baking powder and spices. Sawdust, straw-dust and nutshell dust are sold at the incredible prices as food adulterants. Carpenter's glue is used in the manufacture of pudding powder, and flour sweepings in the baking of bread. Foreign substitutes found in the bread included flax fabrics, cotton, wood pulp, straw and sand.

The bread of one bakery contained 13 per cent of copper. In pepper was found 84 per cent of ashes and 3 per cent of sand. Some of the food profiteers are being sent to prison as well as being fined. In one case reported by the Tageblatt a stockkeeper in Dresden was sentenced to one year in prison and to pay a fine of 192,521 marks.

GERMANS FIND "SUBSTITUTES" BIG HANDICAP

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 25.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) German's famine in cotton, wool and edible oils and fats is not being alleviated by the ingenious "just as good" substitutes which have been provided since the war, according to Emil Zimmermann, a well known authority on colonial subjects, in an article in the Berlin Tageliche Rundschau.

"Nothing," he complains, "has cut so deeply into our daily life as the lack of fats and the absence of raw textile materials. One dovetails into the other, for no fat means no soap—no soap means chemical substitutes—chemical substitutes ruin clothes, and clothes we cannot replace without wool and cotton.

"Dairy produce has fallen off 65 per cent, and animal fat has almost completely vanished from the country," Zimmermann writes, unconsciously, perhaps, revealing the inner truth of Germany's precarious position, when he declares: "We must have colonies from which we can draw large quantities of raw materials at once, and not after fifteen to twenty years of fighting."

The rich territory of Central and West Africa appeals to the German economic expert as the possible site of a Teutonic colonial empire that would overshadow even Emperor William's fondest dreams. He would draw 700,000 tons of vegetable oils and fats annually from Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Dahomey, Togoland, the Fomeroons, the Congo and Senegambia. Acquisition of oil producing territory by Germany is advocated by the writer on the ground that the African oil regions could be "obtained with comparative ease."

Zimmermann says that the Congo basin can in thirty to fifty years be raised to rich productivity and become a second Brazil.
