

ALLIED RAIDS CAUSE PANICS THRU GERMANY

LONDON, Oct. 5.—(Correspondence Associated Press)—A belt of the Rhine Valley, roughly 250 miles long, from Cologne in the north to the Grand Duchy of Baden in the south, a region crowded with war industries and intersected by a railway system of vital strategic importance to the German army in France, is now a definite part of the war zone. This is one of the most striking and significant developments of the Allied campaign, and how big are its possibilities may be gauged by the vast damage, both physical and moral, already inflicted upon the enemy.

Over that region in the three months the airman, operating day and night, have made 249 raids, dropping 207 tons of bombs upon enemy railway centers, munition works, poison gas factories, electrical and engineering plants, blast furnaces, aerodromes and other important military objectives.

The effects of these raids have been of incalculable benefit to the Allies. One of the first was the compulsory withdrawal by the Germans of a large number of their airplanes from the fighting front for the defense of the Rhine.

But a greater gain has been the profound and widespread depression caused to the German people, the "home front," to use the phrase of Ludendorf. Captured letters from places as widely separated as Mannheim and Cologne testify to the terror and panic inspired by the raids among the civil population. Well-to-do families, in increasing numbers, are seeking the temporary security of more distant inland towns. There are indications that the flight of the wealthy is causing intense resentment among the working population, who, being for the most part engaged in war industries, are exposed to almost nightly danger from the raiders. But the terror of the German populace is not confined to the territory actually added to the war zone. It exists throughout the country, particularly in far-distant Berlin, where preparations already have been made to defend the city against raids.

SERBIANS NOW NEARING THEIR OLD FRONTIER

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 15.—Serbia, with a well equipped army of 4,000,000 men, expect soon to face Austria and Germany on her line she occupied in August, 1914, known as the "Sava-Danube line," Captain S. Mitutinovich, head of a Serbian recruiting mission to the United States, declared here today.

Since Serbia became active in recruiting her nationals in this country over 60,000 have left these shores for the Macedonian campaign, the officer said, adding that fifteen thousand of these, five hundred of them from California, participating in the sharp decisive campaigns in the territory behind the Vrania-Nish line, which resulted in the Pularan debacle and the clearing of Albania of Austrian troops.

Thousands of Serbian soldiers who fled to the mountains of their country when the Austro-German flood poured over the land, rejoined their fellows and again took up arms in their country's defense when that flood was swept back by the Serbo-French advance. These self-called men lived primitively in the mountain fastnesses, too few to check the invaders, but hoping and praying for the time when they might again join the army of their country. They were thrilled with joy, Captain Mitutinovich said, when they saw the armies of Serbia sweeping thru the land.

Since Bulgarian troops forced to serve in the Bulgarian army and themselves free to cast in their lot with Serbia and the Jugo-Slav detachments from liberated portions of the Adriatic coast, Captain Mitutinovich said. These men, all trained to the minute, are adding heavily to the weight of the Slav forces, in his opinion.

Dearest Public:

What I am trying to impress on your mind is that we are having a real sale on the many lines that we handle. Have you or are you interested enough to come in and let us show you.

Besides shopping early, you save money.

You look after the pennies and the dollars will look after themselves.

Once I had most 60 cents, but never was exposed to the dollars.

Time waits for no man and a like number of women. But the man or woman who does not have the time nowadays is jobless.

Say, you little sleepless night, when you are having one of those regular waking spells, come in and see what we have that we are making this talk about.

After tomorrow this golden opportunity will be closed. We have no silver lined cloud, but a fine line of silver plated ware.

I need your help, so please hurry.

ANNOUNCEMENT

In order to place my independent candidacy for sheriff of Klamath County before the people in a general way I have adopted this method. Having served the people as sheriff, and feeling that my record as such officer will compare favorably with that of my predecessors, I do not feel that it is necessary for me to enter into a detailed resume of my official career—my record as such officer meets your commendation or it does not. Suffice it to say that I am offering my independent candidacy upon that record, and am soliciting the support of that record. In doing so, I am not actuated by any unusual circumstance or desire. I feel that the consciousness of having served the people in that office faithfully in the past entitles me to place my independent candidacy before them for their consideration. In doing so, I can frankly say that I am not hampered or controlled by, nor am I the candidate of, any clique or combination that I stand absolutely upon my own merits as an independent candidate; that I am free and clear of any pre-election pledge or combination that would in any manner tend to embarrass me, if elected, in giving the people an impartial administration of the office.

FOUR LINES OF DEFENSE WERE READY FOR HUN

Editors Note.
The following article was prepared by an Associated Press correspondent previous to the smashing victories of the Allies during the past few days. Since it was written the stronghold of Lille and a considerable portion of the territory mentioned has fallen into the Allied hands but there is some ground yet to cover and the reader who is following the war progress on the map will be able to trace the fortifications already taken and those yet to be gained. The article was prepared with a release date of today and indicated how much more rapidly the Allied victory has developed than was anticipated.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, (Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Where the German army will endeavor to make its next stand once the whole Hindenburg line is definitely abandoned is now a big question in the minds of the intelligence officers of the American army. Information has reached them showing that the Hindenburg line is but one element of a multiple system of defense works which the Germans have constructed across Northern France. The cities of Lille, and Metz constitute the pillars of these great lines of resistance. The two cities are enormous entrenched camps and are the extremities of a series of curved lines one inside the other.

The first of these lines was the Hindenburg system now crumbling before the Allied attacks. Back of this is a second German line of resistance which is called here the Hunting line. Possibly the Germans may endeavor to stem the tide of defeat by standing upon that line. It starts from south of Lille, extends from the western outskirts of Douai, passes east of Le Cateau to Fresnoy, skirts the left bank of the Oise and the right bank of the Sambre, heads back toward Elnonnes, follows the northern bank of the Aisne to southeast of Vouziers. Thence it extends southeast along the base of the sinuous Saint Mihiel salient.

Behind the Hunting line is a third system known as the Metz-Lille line. It starts at the Scarpe river about eight miles east of Douai, crosses the Escaut river, passes thru Le Cateau and west of Avesnes and Hirson, covers Meslens-Charleville and Sedan, follows the right bank of the Meuse, defends Briery and Comblains-Jarny and virtually rejoins the Hindenburg line at Pagny-sur-Moselle.

Finally, the elements of a fourth line of retreat exists, running from Valenciennes to Oivet, on which the Germans also were reported recently as being hard at work.

These principal lines are, naturally, joined up by auxiliary lines, or "braces". There is or was one on the left bank of the Escaut between Cambrai and Valenciennes, another between Hirson and Vervins, and others between the second and third lines along the Sambre, between the first and second lines to the south of and still others possibly now in the course of construction.
