U. S. SOLDIERS MAKE LIGHT OF THEIR WOUNDS

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Many American soldiers when treated in evacuation hospitals refuse to admit being badly hurt even when their wounds are most serious and painful, say Red Cross workers who serve chocolate and cigarettes to them.

"Look at my partner over there. He stopped three pills, I only got two. Serve him first," said one Missouri boy to a Red Cross worker passing out hot drinks.

"Nothing the matter with me. I'm lucky, my buddy was killed," another man told a worker as she put the rubber tube into his mouth so that he could sip chocolate while lying on a stretcher in a hospital train.

Another boy said all he wanted was a little talk with an American girl.

The average individual is responding to this call in the same generous manner that he has met the best of others during the war, according to the leaders, but there is a decided tendency on the part of the wealthier individuals to fight shy of meeting the quota ascribed to them.

Irving E. Vining, the well known speaker of Ashland, who gave such splendid addresses here several times during the past few months has again been in the county in the interest of this move and also public meetings
