

Klamath Falls Women

Klamath Falls has a good many things to be proud of, and among the desirable features of the community, it occurs to us that the most praiseworthy is the women.

Not only are they valuable additions to the wonderful "scenic attractions," which are bringing this district so prominently into the foreground, but past records show that they have done much more for the moral and civic development of the community outside of the sphere in which they usually move, than is customary in most other places.

This is perhaps particularly fresh in mind just at this time, when their activities in the terrible epidemic are so vividly before us. In reviewing the conditions here throughout the war, we are again brought to realize the enormous effort which has been put forth by the women of the district along the various lines of endeavor.

A grand proportion of the men went off to take part in the fighting itself, and of their sacrifice enough praise can never be given, taking into consideration the work done here at home, when it comes to a candid admission we fear we will have to hand it to the women. Most of them probably realized that the best of the men were gone, and if they wanted them back, they would have to work. But anyway they did it, and a big share in the final glorious result is theirs. It was the women who did most of the canvassing in the various war drives, who got your Red Cross donation, your Y. M. C. A. subscription and your war stamp purchase. It has been the women who have knitted the socks and the sweaters, spent the long days at the surgical dressing room and the sewing room, made the soldiers' kits, bade them goodbye at the train and successfully concluded other projects to which we look back with pride.

Before the war we boasted a great deal about how a community of this size could successfully start a 20-mile railroad of its own, and gloated in no small degree over our unusual enterprise. In looking back now we suddenly recall the fact that while the men did have considerable to do in the beginning, it finally devolved upon the women to get out in the snow and raise the terminal fund to a total which assured the road.

Klamath Falls can sure count on her women.

FOUR MINUTE MEN'S SPEECH

OUR NEW DUTY

The Red Cross has been the practical prophet of peace. Thru the storm of battle it has gone to the torn and tortured peoples, ground beneath the heel of brutal savagery, and carried to them healing and sustenance and help. It has fed the hungry, clothed the naked, cared for the sick, sheltered the homeless—ministered as a mother to the distressed children of men.

And its work is only begun. Now that the end has come, war has left the world broken and bleeding. Natural resources in the fairest parts of Europe are exhausted—the very machinery of life has been left shattered and disorganized. As nation after nation emerges from the struggle they need encouragement and help for the problems that confront them.

For four years the allies have fought for liberty and human freedom. The strongest are weakened—the feeble are all but ruined. For three years they fought the battle for the world. Then we fought beside them, and fighting we won. It cost us treasure and precious life, but not commensurate with what they have given. Behind us there still stands the incalculable measure and might of the great Republic. We did not know, perhaps why America had grown so great—why she had waxed so mighty in wealth and vast endowment. We thought it was all for ourselves—and we measured our greatness by our abundance.

But now we understand that America had gathered, not for the keeping but for the giving, not for the saving but for the spending—we have learned that the real greatness of America is not in her vast expanse and her scarcely untouched possibilities, but in her capacity for service—service for the common good.

This shall be the glory—the lasting glory of America, as with clean hands and a pure heart she rises to the serene height of her destiny.

For that gospel of service the Red Cross stands.

And its work will not be ended until a redeemed and rebuilt world rejoices in the justice, the righteousness, and the lasting peace of a self-governed and self-governing democracy.

UNDERWOOD'S PHARMACY

WHY NOT A KODAK FOR CHRISTMAS?

Dearest Public:

Please to accept another of our thanks for your timely aid, and I want to tell you now that English language ain't half big enough to tell you all I want to.

Blessed is the cheerful giver. Be one, and see how you feel.

We still have a few diamonds, and, Birdie, if you're going to change nesting places, you'd better have Benjamin get this, and soon, as procrastination is the treacherous 'old cuss, and, besides, there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip.

We have some new umbrellas, and if you want a good one see these.

If you're going to take your money with you to the Great Beyond, you can make special arrangements with the mint to have it printed on asbestos. Wonderful line of casseroles and pie plates and Thermos bottles and hand decorated china.

We engrave on Ivory, and you should see some of this work, it's very pretty, and lends an effect.

We still have a few wrist watches, and, Sam, if you want a real watch come and let us show you the real thing.

We can repair most anything but your reputation, and you take that to the guy that gave it to you and cite him to the book that records the sayings of the man that we are about to celebrate the anniversary of his birth. He says, Judge not least you be judged.

We have some silver backed cloth brushes that must be sold, and you can have a choice for two merry dollars.

Don't be a habit, as a habit is something someone is always trying to break. Have you seen our windows? It will pay you to do so.

Please hurry to our aid. McHattan, between Sixth and Seventh streets, on the wrong side, No. 405 Main street.
