C. T. DARLEY

When the people of this county elected C. T. Darley surveyor they builded better than they knew. It was apparently an unimportant office, but the day is not far distant when it will develop into one of the most important in the county, and in selecting Mr. Darley the people have been very fortunate. For a good many years Mr. Darley lived in the vicinity of Bonanza dreaming dreams of irrigation projects in his neighborhood. He had personal interests that demanded a good deal of his time and attention, but whenever he had a spare moment, his mind dwelt upon his pet project—the irrigation of the surrounding valleys. He realized that he had an uphill job. The hopes of the people had been raised so often only to be dashed against the governmental rock of red tape and one-sided contracts, that they did not readily give ear to the suggestion that they undertake the job themselves.

Finally his perseverance won, and the first undertaking was launched—Unit No. 1 of the Horseshoe project. The people on the outside had no confidence in the thing, and even those who were to be benefited felt that it was a very doubtful proposition. The bonds were a drug on the market, and no contractor would figure on the work. But Darley was undaunted. He said he would do it himself, and that he would have the land under water within two years. He not only finished the job, but he had the water on the land within one year. Then came the Yonah Valley project, and it had to pass thru the same trials and tribulations, but Darley had confidence in his own judgment, and he carried the work to completion. By this time the people of Langell Valley and Shasta View saw what this young man was doing, and appealed to him for help. The appeal was not in vain, for he went after the new task with a vim. As a result the Langell Valley project is well on its way, and the Shasta View scheme bids fair soon to follow the same course.

Already Klamath County has the foundation laid for a splendid system of highways. This would be wasted in the hands of an incompetent engineer, but with Mr. Darley at the helm the people of the county may feel assured that the money spent heretofore will be saved, and that saved by the preservation of the grading already done will be used for surfacing, instead of being squandered by a lot of unnecessary grading. And this is as it should be. This grading was done with the ultimate surfacing of the roads in view, and but little, if any, money will be required to get them into shape for paving. Mr. Darley will need the co-operation and support of the people, and in return they may feel sure that their confidence was well placed.

The pecuniary reward that Darley will reap from his labors will be but a mere bagatelle, but he is happy in the thought that he has helped his fellow man. He is of the stuff empire builders are made from, and that is why we say that the people of this county were wiser than they knew when they selected him for county surveyor. What he has done for the people of the upper country, he will do for all of the people of the county in the matter of building roads. When he undertakes the job, you will not find him splitting hairs as to whether the immaterial details are polished off with a "photographic finish," but when he is thru you will find the work well done, that it is serviceable, practical, and every dollar spent will be represented by 100 cents' worth of actual construction.

On Their Way

German royalty, having started on the road to oblivion, is likely to shatter the world's non-stop record.—Chicago News.

At the Theaters

William S. Hart, admittedly America's premier interpreter of rugged frontier types, has the leading role in "The Primal Lure," Triangle production of Vingie E. Roe's celebrated novel of the same name, adapted for the screen by J. G. Hawks. It will be seen at the Star Theatre tonight.

"The Primal Lure" is an absorbing drama of life in the great Canadian Northwest. It recites the stirring romance of Angus McConnell, a young Scotch-Canadian factor, and Lois Le Moynes, daughter of a French settler at the post. It is replete with thrilling encounters with the Blackfoot Indians and teems with a love interest rivaled in its appeal only by the picturesque beauty of the story's background.

Hart has the role of McConnell and he has invested it, it is declared, with rare power. While the part is unlike that of "Blaze" Tracy in "Hell's Hinges" or Steve Denton in "The Arvan," it has provided the noted actor with the same opportunities for forceful characterization.

Tom Mix, the dashing and daring Fox Star has been doing some splendid work on the screen that has placed him among perhaps the finest and certainly the most picturesque that he has accomplished in his newest play "Ace High" that will be shown at the Liberty Theatre tonight only.

Many stories have been written and some have been shown on the screen about the North Western Mounted Police but this is the first time that the part has been played and the picture produced by one who was at one time a member of this famous corps and one familiar with the country where the scenes are laid.

In this picture he brings the very breath of the woods to the screen and shows the splendid mounted guardian of the law of the Northwest as he really is.

Tom Mix as the brave and heroic youth will give you thrills that you have never seen before in his battles with the human wolves on the outposts of civilization.

One of the new and popular Jester comedies with Tweedle Dan in "The Recruit" will afford you a half hour amusement with his company of comedians.

Book Review

The first book on reconstruction has just been published, and it is by a western man known all over the world—Dr. David Starr Jordan, famous scientist, scholar, educational leader and executive, peace advocate and publicist. Dr. Jordan tells why he was in accord with President Wilson in waging war on Germany; and then tells how democracy may be now insured for all people forever.

There is nothing that savors of "pacifism" in this book. It is a clear straightforward, convincing argument for democracy, versus autocracy, recognizing fully the dangers and pitfalls in any system of government, and yet showing how much more dangerous it is to try to avoid these dangers by renouncing the task of self-government.

In Democracy and World Relations, Dr. Jordan gives in simple language one of the most complete expositions of the methods and aims of democracy, and its relation to problems of nationalism, nationality, colonial administration, diplomacy, and internationalism.

In contrast with the ideals of democracy, Dr. Jordan presents a searching analysis of its opposite, the dynastic state. He shows how the power of Germany has been built up by sinking the individuality of her people.

In the final chapters is given a simple and clear exposition of the meaning of the League of Nations. Its existence depends on democratic initiative and its continuance on the spread of good-will and conciliation, inevitable when the tap-root of war, the dynastic system of government, has been eradicated.

The volume deals not with the war but rather with conditions which preceded it and those which are to follow. It was originally planned as a textbook or reference book for high schools and colleges. It is written in a candid, non-controversial spirit, befitting such a purpose.

DEMOCRACY AND WORLD RELATIONS, by Dr. David Starr Jordan, Chancellor of Leland Stanford Junior University, Cloth. Quarto, vii—158 pages. $1.20. World Book Company, Yonkers-on-Hudson, New York.

LORELLA LOCALS

Since the lifting of the flu ban, social activities have been revived in the neighborhood.

On Dec. 23rd, Mrs. Will Campbell entertained at a seven o'clock dinner in honor of her husband's birthday. Covers were laid for ten guests. The table decorations were "Flags of the Allies." The center piece was a group of Xmas gifts tastefully camouflaged. A red ribbon tied to the gifts led to each guests plate. The remainder of the evening was spent in playing Five Hundred.

On New Year's eve Mrs. Oscar Campbell entertained a large company at a seven o'clock dinner. Notwithstanding the fact that the mercury was many degrees below zero, the guests were all on hand at the appointed hour. After dinner Five Hundred was enjoyed by all present, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Keller carrying off first prize. The company stayed to help usher in the New Year and left after wishing Mr. and Mrs. Campbell a Happy New Year and expressing a wish for many more such pleasant gatherings.

Mr. Bunney Casey and Mrs. Geo. Noble left for Ashland Friday in response to a telegram telling of the serious illness of their father, Robert Casey.

Ben Brown and Alfred Keller went to the Falls last week in Ben's new Ford truck and brought back Mrs. Keller's piano which had been shipped from her home in the east.

Among others who entertained New Year's Eve were Mr. and Mrs. Will Fordney, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Cowley and Mr. and Mrs. Cy Poole.

The intense cold of the past few days has made ideal ice for cutting and storing. H. E. Winnard and son, Howard have been busy getting up their supply of ice for the coming summer.

Mrs. Lizzie Haines returned from Ashland last week. She was called there by the illness of her daughter, Lorena, who returned with her mother.

Mrs. Chris Cowley has been called to the bedside of her brother, Frank who is ill with pneumonia.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

DRUGGIST SAYS LADIES ARE USING RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture, improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

Some Alarm Clocks Are "Duds"

The shell that didn't explode may have thrown a scare into the soldiers near by. But the alarm clock that you wind at night, and that doesn't go off in the morning, is a "dud" of the worst kind. It's a hopeless proposition—costs too much to repair, and is worthless as a getting-up device.

These are alarm clock days—cold and dark in the morning. It's easy to sleep too late. Come down to Upp's and get a Break-o-Day or other active alarm. These will get you up without fail—prove a mighty good investment.
