

GREECE COMES OUT FROM WAR IN GOOD SHAPE

(Note—The subjoined letter from Athens was written by a staff correspondent of the Associated Press who went to Greece after the signing of the armistice, and who has filed several stories by cable, telling of the great suffering and numerous deaths among the 100,000 or more Greeks deported from Macedonia by Bulgarians during the war, and the problems presented to the Greek government in providing for them now that they are returning to Greece.)

ATHENS—Correspondence of Associated Press—Few large cities of the country that were engaged in the war have been less affected by it than the ancient capital of Greece. Free entirely from the menace of air raids and hostile bombardment, and participating actively in the war for comparatively only a short time, Athens is today in all essential features exactly as it was in pre-war days.

There is scarcely any outward sign that the country ever was in the great world conflict. During the entire progress of the war, all the stores, theaters, cafes, museums and places of amusement in the Greek metropolis were doing business as usual and the inhabitants felt only remotely the effects of the war.

Prices of food and clothing were much higher than in peace times, but the people suffered no such scarcity of these and other necessities of life as did the populations of London, Paris and other continental cities.

The tourist, who at one time was one of the most abundant sources of revenue, however, disappeared entirely during the war.

The passing years appear on the whole to have made little change in the Athenian capital. If the visitor who knew Athens well in days long ago could pay another pilgrimage to the historic city, he would still see the same quaint sights that have always made Athens appear to the foreigner rustic and unsophisticated. In the midst of all its cosmopolitanism, he would see a number of milk goats roaming down one of the main streets, picking up orange peel and paper bags in the gutter, while their owner drew the sweet warm milk from them to fill the bottles and pitchers of the busy Greek housewives who emerged from their homes in response to the tinkle of the goats' bells and the hawking cry of the fua-tanella-clad herdsman. He would see also the countless little Greek gamins, dirty and ragged, that are so much a part of the life of the capital, and who shine shoes and sell lottery tickets.

Another familiar sight would be the old women, thin, tanned and bent with years, with black handkerchiefs tied under their chins and carrying on their backs dilapidated hampers of wild herbs and salad leaves, which they dispose of to the abstemious Greek householders of the neighborhood for about 25 lepta (5 cents) a quart. Greek funeral processions, in which the body of the deceased is carried in an open hearse, fully exposed and without coffin or covering, are familiar sights.

Other cities change with times, but Athens seems as immutable today as it was in the centuries that have gone. Three wars within a decade have altered only slightly the life, characteristics and institutions of the ancient city of Hellas.

THIS PERSON NEEDED SOME DECORATIONS

VIENNA. (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—Of how little importance and significance were some of the orders and decorations bestowed upon princes and nobles during the war is indicated by a little story now going the rounds in Vienna. It concerns Albrecht, the son of Archduke Friedrich.

He was assigned to the front with a Tyrol Kaiser regiment, but with instructions to the colonel and commander that he must never be endangered. In 1917 the regiment had a strenuous battle with the Italians at Schludersbach and suffered heavy losses.

When the authorities looked over the list of recommendations for decorations after the battle it was noticed that Archduke Albrecht's name was not present. It was learned that he had been three kilometers behind the line during the fighting. The colonel declared he could not cite him as one of his bravest, since it would make ill-feeling among the soldiers and was not justified.

An order then was issued commanding the colonel to recommend Albrecht for the golden medal for bravery, and when the officer refused he was relieved from his command.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

DRUGGIST SAYS LADIES ARE USING RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture, improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.
