THE HERD LAW

Klamath County does not want any herd law. Such a measure would be as ruinous to the cattle industry as the Merryman bill to the sheep industry, and the Herald will leave nothing undone to defeat such a bill, should the legislature undertake to foist such an iniquitous law upon the people of this state.

Judge Baldwin offers a constructive suggestion—a get-together policy. His suggestion should be heeded. He is on the ground and in close touch with the sentiment among the legislators, a sentiment that often does not make its appearance on the surface until it is too late to direct it into the proper channels.

can better be settled between the conflicting interests themselves. The statement has been made that no agreement can be reached that can be enforced. Yes, there can be. There are two methods—the banks and the government. The banks hold the purse strings. The stockman who would violate an agreement would be in a position where he could not get a dollar to carry on his operations unless the banks said so.

Such a program could be arranged as to settle for all time the range question. The sheep industry would be placed on a permanent basis and those engaged in it could plan for the future accordingly. The cattlemen would know just what they could expect, and both guard the range against outside interference.
