THE LINK RIVER DAM.

As we expected, Mr. Bradbury quite conclusively proved that the charges, made against him by Mr. Of-field, were unfounded. Mr. Bradbury has shown himself in this matter to be working solely for the best interests of the people—the farmer who has to foot the bill.Continuing our reference to Mr.
Offield's "Fourth" reason why the contract with the Power company should not be tested, we want to call your attention to the second paragraph thereof, wherein he says:"If there is any water power which belongs to the Klamath Project, it is of vital interest to the units which irrigate by pumping and not by gravity flow, which, as I said before, is all the Reclamation Law ever promised us."Mr. Offield's legal erudition is quite remarkable for a layman. Remarkable from the fact that his conclusions are always against the men who put him in office and who supposed that while he was there he would work to find the law that protected their rights and not the law that took them away. Evidently he has been drinking from the legal pool that fills the mind with peculiar ideas as to the administration of a trust.
If, as he suggests, the power is only of value and interest to the man who irrigates through pumping, it is not a pretty narrow, selfish view to take of it? Is he not worthy of help? Is it not the duty of Mr. Offield and every man in Klamath County to help that man get his power, and the water, under the very best, the very cheapest, the most convenient conditions and terms? Think of the man, who for decades has been waiting and praying for irrigation, to be told, now that there is a chance of his realizing his dream: "Don't bother us with your troubles, we have water for our land."But is it not of interest to the man who irrigates his land by gravity flow—a selfish interest? He owns the power. He paid for it, no matter what Mr. Offield, or the Reclamation Service, or anyone else says. He will have that power to sell. Who will buy it and in buying it help pay back to the farmer the outrageous cost he paid to get his gravity flow? Will not the man who irrigates his land by pumping be an important factor in this matter? Is he not deserving of consideration from a business standpoint? The landowners must not lose sight of the fact that the power is going to pay back to them the money they have invested. They must not be swindled out of this idea as some are trying to swindle them out of that power. It is worth as much to the farmer as it is to anyone or any corporation. It will earn for them the same dividends. And these dividends will do for them what they are today doing for the farmers under the Salt River Project—pay the cost of construction, maintenance and operation.

He says further:

"If anyone should fight over power, it is the people who will use it and will have to pay for it, and these people are not included in the Irrigation District. If the proposed dam at the head of Link River is a bad thing, let those who are directly interested do the fighting. The Herald and a few chronic agitators in and around Klamath Falls have constituted themselves a new Moses to lead us out of the wilderness."That is a fine argument for a man who is supposed to represent the interests of the farmers of the Klamath project. In this instance the Herald is glad to be found among the agitators. It is glad to be numbered with the men who are fighting to save the people that for which they have paid, that which they own and which, with the direct aid and assistance of Mr.Offield, certain interests are trying to turn over to the California-Oregon Power company without a dollar of consideration. Would it not look better for Mr. Offield to be found in such company? Would he not feel better as he tried to close his eyes in sleep, if he did so with a consciousness that he had been with the men and the newspaper that was working for the development of the Klamath Basin and not for the development of the interests and dividends of the California-Oregon Power company? Agitators? Yes, if that is what agitator means. That epithet, under such coloring, is an honor, and if it were being hurled at Mr. Offield he would have no reason to hang his head in shame.Mr. Offield has no reason to feel aggrieved with The Herald. He was given every opportunity to place himself right before the men who trusted him sufficiently to elect him to the board of directors. He was asked to let the district join in the suit to test the contract. He was asked to step aside and let the man who has shown he has the interests of the land owners at heart head the District board.
He refused, voting for himself in order to secure the office of president.
He has been urged to save the power to the project, and he replied by calling them agitators. In this very word he has summed up his real views on this question and has stamped himself as a man who should be kicked off the board. He has cast aside every consideration they may have had for him and flung in their faces the confidence they reposed in him. If he has any self-respect left, he will resign, or at least turn the presidency of the board over to Mr. Bradbury.
He is the man who should make this fight, and Mr. Offield and Mr. Marshall must not interfere with him in doing so. He must have full swing, with all of the help and assistance the district shall give him, and to that end he must name his assistants and have full control. He will then have the responsibility, and he alone will be accountable to the stockholders of the district. If the vote to test the contract is what we anticipate it is going to be, we shall insist on this program, and these gentlemen might just as well adjust themselves to it now. Already they have become liable under their bond for heavy damages, and if they do not want to face legal proceedings, they must cease their efforts to keep the farmers from recovering their property, or take the consequences.STRAHORN HERE
