FOREST ROADS TO BE BUILT NOW RAPIDLY

PORTLAND, March 11.—The development of the National Forest road systems in Oregon and Washington is given great impetus by the terms of the Post Office Appropriation Act, which the President has just signed. Besides increasing by $200,000,000 the total fund available under the Federal Aid Roads Act, the new law makes available for expenditure by the Secretary of Agriculture $9,000,000 for roads and trails within or partly within the Forests.

The law also authorizes the Secretary of War to transfer to the Secretary of Agriculture material, equipment, and supplies suitable for highway improvement and not needed by the War Department. While most of this will be distributed among the highway commissions of the states for use on federal aid projects, not to exceed ten per cent may be reserved by the Secretary of Agriculture for use in building National Forest roads or other roads constructed under his direct supervision.

The $9,000,000 fund may be used for maintenance as well as survey and construction. The new legislation, like the Federal Aid Roads Act, makes the building of roads and trails necessary for the use and development of National Forest resources or desirable for the proper administration, protection and improvement of any Forest contingent upon local contributions; but in addition to this it contains a new feature of much importance.

This new feature permits the Secretary of Agriculture, without the co-operation of local officials, to build and maintain "any road or trail within a National Forest which he finds necessary for the proper administration, protection, and improvement of such Forest, or which in his opinion is of national importance." In the view of forestry officials this law is the most important step ever taken for rapid development of a National Forest roads system, and will be of inestimable benefit to the local public.

"The measure gives us much broader scope for a fully developed program than we have had before," says Henry S. Graves, chief of the Forest Service, in commenting on the new law. "Under the Federal Aid Roads Act we had available, for roads within or partly within the Forests, one million dollars a year, available until expended. Owing to the war, which practically halted the work, we have an accumulated balance of $2,500,000 unexpended and another $1,000,000 which will become available July 1.

"Of the new appropriation $3,000,000 is immediately available, and $3,000,000 will become available July 1. There will also be available $400,000 or more from the ten per cent of National Forest receipts. Altogether, therefore, we have in sight for the coming year about $10,000,000. If we can use it advantageously, whatever we can't use advantageously will be added to the $4,000,000 of new money that becomes available the following year.

"We already have our plans for approved road projects sufficiently shaped up so that a prompt start will be possible as soon as the weather permits. In some cases, however, these plans must necessarily be suspended on account of pending proposals for the creation of National Parks affecting National Forest lands. It would be obviously improper to expend the funds intended and voted by Congress for the development and protection of the National Forests on areas which may soon cease to be National Forests.

This legislation will not only make it easier to protect the Forests without costly expenditures to fight bad fires in inaccessible localities, but will also help enormously the many small communities and scattered settlers in and near the Forests who now suffer for lack of roads. It will also enable the construction of important trunk line roads crossing the mountains, with suitable provision of subsidiary roads. One result will unquestionably be a marked development of recreational use of these great national playgrounds, with their wealth of too little known attractions. Altogether, the opening up of the Forests to more complete and varied use of the public, which is the fundamental object of their administration, will be tremendously advanced."

Under the law preference is given to the employment of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines for the required labor.
