ANOTHER JOB FOR KLAMATH

In our anxiety over the road legislation, the people of this county overlooked a measure of just as vital importance to its welfare as the construction of good roads, railroads or anything else—it is the amendment to the constitution which authorizes the state to pay interest on bonds of drainage and irrigation districts for the first five years after issue. This amendment will be submitted for the approval of the voters at the special election on June 3d.

Eastern Oregon is vitally interested in this measure; so is Klamath County. Its passage means the expenditure, during the next five years, in Eastern Oregon of upwards of $25,000,000. It will mean the successful launching of several new irrigation projects, several of which will be in Klamath County.

The following statement, issued by the Oregon Irrigation congress gives some idea of the importance of this measure:

The legislature of the State of Oregon submitted to the people for their approval on June 3d an amendment to the constitution which authorizes the state to pay interest on bonds of drainage and irrigation districts for the first five years after issue.

The interests of the State of Oregon are amply safe-guarded, and to secure the benefits of the act, the project must have the approval of the state engineer, the attorney general and the state superintendent of banks. The districts, after their project has been found feasible by the above officials, will enter into contract with the state to pay the annual interest, upon interest-bearing certificates, due after the final maturity of the district's bonds. Thus, while the State of Oregon assumes and pays the annual interest for five years, from funds raised from the sale of its own bonds, the interest thereon is paid by the various districts. There is no outlay of money on the part of the state, and no expense or cost to the state.

This proposed amendment is one of the greatest steps toward the development of Oregon that has ever been taken.

It will mean the expenditure in the counties of Klamath, Lake, Deschutes, Crook and Jefferson of over $25,000,000 within the next five years.

It will mean that every feasible, sound irrigation or drainage district in Klamath County can find a ready market for its bonds.

It will mean that bonds will sell at par, instead of around ninety, and the interest may be reduced from 6 per cent to 5 per cent.

It will mean that every district that can have its bonds certified under the existing law can secure the benefit of the state's guarantee of its interest for the five year period between the time of the sale of the bonds and the time when the ranch will become a paying and producing farm.

The Oregon Irrigation congress originated this measure, and secured its passage through the legislature. As president of that organization I gave my entire time to the passage of this amendment during the session of the last legislature. The Irrigation Congress has no funds with which to make a campaign, and it will be necessary for the progressive, active men of Central and Southern Oregon to give of their energy and enterprise to interest their friends at home and throughout the State of Oregon to vote and work for the passage of this amendment.

Will you help? Will you write your friends? Will you let me know what success you are having? Let us get back of it. Let us interest our friends. It means much to Klamath, and Klamath should get in the forefront in support of this amendment.
