THE REVISED COVENANT

Criticism of the Paris covenant of a league of nations has been fruitful of good. The summary of the revised covenant contains almost all of the changes which have been suggested in opposition to acceptance of the original document, and all are evidently made in order to conciliate American opinion.

The Monroe Doctrine is distinctly recognized. So also are arbitration treaties which have been made to preserve peace. No nation may be given a mandate to administer a backward country without its consent. Any nation may withdraw from the league on two years' notice after fulfilling all its engagements as a member.

Some of the most severe strictures on the covenant have been provoked by its alleged impairment of national sovereignty. It has been said that in certain contingencies the power to declare war would be taken from congress and would be vested in the league council, on which the United States would have only one of nine votes.

It has also been said that the section regarding armament would deprive congress of power to decide what military force we should maintain and would permit agents of foreign powers to come to this country and investigate our armaments and munition factories. As the dispatch reads, those objections are met by requiring that decisions on matters "of international interest or affecting the peace of the world" shall be unanimous without excepting the nations interested and by requiring the consent of the nations concerned to suggestion for reduction of armaments.

Apparently the unanimous vote of the council on a suggestion for settlement of a dispute must also include both disputing nations, which would give the loser a vote on its own case. But that nation would be pledged not to enforce its claim by war on pain of attack by all league members. Upon this point further news will be awaited with interest.

There is room for question here whether American sovereignty is not protected at the risk of success of the league. The object being to prevent war, and, after all other means have failed, to make war on a nation which fights in defiance of the league, it is necessary that when the contemplated contingency arises, war shall be the certain penalty. It is inevitable that each nation shall be bound to do its part, and that, to that extent, its sovereignty be abridged. The relative positions of nations will be unchanged, however, for the sovereignty of all nations will be abridged in the same proportion. This is true also as to reduction of armaments.

The most important amendments in the covenant appear to have been made in order to clear the way for ratification by the senate. This is an evidence of the high estimation in which the adhesion of this country is held by the allies. They are in dire need of this country's help in settling the affairs of the old world and in keeping them settled. This nation has prospered far more than it has lost in the war, and alone among the great belligerents, is in a position to restore the mental balance of the world, for it alone has kept its balance, free from the nerve-racking that verges on hysteria which other nations have suffered. By joining the league and by doing more than our full share of its work, we can help Europe back into orderly courses, and can save ourselves from the perils of a renewal of war.

It is to be hoped that the points obscure will be cleared, and that the changes will prove not to have impaired its effectiveness. Where the amendments are clear, they have strengthened it and have made American interests secure. Senators should prepare their minds to consider it favorably, remembering that the world in suspense awaits their action. —Oregonian.

SPRING FEVER

How dear to my wife are the spring days of moving.
When the real estate agents all hang out their signs;
The ranches, the hay lands whose value they're proving.
And the "dear little bungalow covered with vines."

"The wide spreading shade tree—the garage that stands nigh it;
A view of the lake, where the sun brightly shines!
It's cheap at the price, and you'd better buy it—
This dear little bungalow, covered with vines."

Oh, spring days of moving; oh, bound to be moving;
Up hill and down moving that comes in the spring.

Our house in the flat I rented last April
For wife read a sign that filled her with thrills;
I found it a question that had but one answer.

And that's why we moved from our home on the hills.
How hard I worked moving, with back that was breaking,
And quick to the white painted cottage we fled;

And soon there were blisters on feet that were aching,
And dripping with moisture, I sat down and cried.

Oh, spring days of moving; oh, bound to be moving;
Up hill and down moving that comes in the spring.

How sweet was the thought that I'd struck a bargain,
As poised on her toes wifey kissed my tired lips;

But the sign in the window with its real estate jargon
Soon filled her head with those up and down trips.

"The wide-spreading shade tree; the garage than stands nigh it,
A view of the lake, where the sun brightly shines;
It's cheap at the price, and you'd better buy it—
This dear little bungalow, covered with vines."

Oh, spring days of moving; oh, bound to be moving;
Up hill and down moving that comes in the spring.

—Observant.

AIRPLANES MAY YET BECOME HAIRY PLANES.

LONDON. (By Mail)—The airplane of the future may be a huge and hairy monster. Dr. G. H. Rodman points out that flies experience no difficulty in regard to sidslips and air pockets, and in his opinion it is because their bodies and wings are covered with rough hair, which "grips" the atmosphere. He recommends that aircraft designers experiment in this direction in order to find a solution of some of their difficulties.

SMALLER C. A. SMITH MILL TO START RUN.

MARSHFIELD, April 16—Receivers of the C. A. Smith interests, who are here, expect next week to start the smaller mill of the company and some of the camps. The plan is to operate and ascertain if the mill can be run economically before attempting to start the big mill. It is announced that the logging operations and lumber manufacture must pay if they are to be continued.

EASTER SERVICES ABOVE THE CLOUDS

LOS ANGELES, Calif., April 16.—Above the clouds, overlooking the San Gabriel Valley, Pasadena and Los Angeles, the annual sunrise religious services will be held Easter morning on Mt. Lowe near here.

Arrangements have been made to make this one of the most impressive and beautiful programs ever held for a like event on the mountain top, almost a mile above sea level.

Hundreds attend the services each year. Lodging will be provided for many Eastern visitors at an inn near the summit. The call of the bugle will herald the event as dawn rises. A procession from the tavern to Easter rock, situated near Inspiration Point, will open the services, which will include hymns, invocation and a brief sermon, delivered by a Los Angeles minister.

Ford Garage open all night. 15-2f

THRIFT Made Easy

Perhaps at some time in the past you have tried to save money, but it proved a little difficult, and you gave it up.

Do not, however, despair. There is an easy way.

To start Thrift but three things are needed:

- 1—A Savings Account in this reliable institution.
- 2—A determination to save so much every week or month.
- 3—Careful management in little things.

Those who practice Thrift naturally save money; in fact—It saves itself!

The Brunswick

ALL PHONOGRAPHS IN ONE

Why the Brunswick Method of Reproduction Insures a Superior Phonograph

Reason No. 1 The Brunswick Method of Reproduction includes the Ultona, a new conception in playing. The Ultona consists of an arrangement of the several necessary reproducing diaphragms upon one tone arm—an all-in-one arrangement, with no attachments—nothing to take off or put on.

At a turn of the hand the Ultona presents to any type of record the proper diaphragm and needle, the exact weight. Thus the requirements of each type of record are met. The Ultona demands no sacrifice in tone, as attachments often do.

Reason No. 2 Equal in importance to reproduction is tone amplification. The Brunswick Method of Reproduction also includes a new idea in acoustics—the Brunswick amplifier.

Old-time ideas were at variance. Some makers still cling to metal construction. Others use a combination of wood and metal—a wooden horn and a metal casting as the "throat."

But the Brunswick Amplifier is oval in shape and built entirely of wood, like a fine violin. It is modeled of rare hollywood. The sound waves receive uniform amplification to reach their fullness, hence the Brunswick tone is richer and more natural. Strident, metallic notes are absent.

WE INVITE COMPARISON

Make comparisons. Let your ear decide. Try to find an equal to Brunswick tone.

You're bound to end such a search at a Brunswick shop, where every opportunity will be given you to decide for yourself.

Hear this remarkable instrument before you decide.
