

Major J. A. Roosevelt,
Who Died on Transport

Twenty-four hours before the transport Great Northern was due at New York, Major James A. Roosevelt, commander of the 302nd Ammunition Train, died suddenly. He was a member of the advance party which was to prepare for the arrival of the Seventy-seventh Division. Major Roosevelt, who was a cousin of the former president, entered the Plattsburg training camp in 1917 and came out a captain.

ENGLISH COAL
DEALERS MADE
HUGE PROFITS

LONDON. (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Testimony concerning enormous profits made by various British collieries was given at the inquiry of the Coal Mines Commission by Albert Emil Davies, general manager of the Banking Corporation and a writer on finance and economics. He stated that 1,000 pounds invested in 1903 in shares, then quoted at par, of a certain company would have earned dividends equal to about 3,800 and would now be salable at 5,500 pounds.

In the case of another company he said that "for the ten years ended in 1918, the dividends paid were equivalent to about 243 percent of the increased capital, or over 300 percent on the actual capital."

The witness said that in most cases the extent of profits in coal had been obscured by the capitalization of reserves or other readjustments of capital.

"By these methods and by dividends," he testified, "the most successful companies are able to return to their shareholders every few years the whole of the share capital originally subscribed by them."

Mr. Davies said that if the coal reserves of the country were pooled, the enormous profits made and partially concealed by the large companies would be available to most part, at least of any additional working costs that might be necessary, and that the Executive to build up reserves for subsequent distribution, which obscures the enormous profits actually being made, would disappear.

What Color
Of A Tune
Do You Like

Perhaps you don't realize there are pink pieces of music, red rags, violet jazz, and blue melodies.

Those who know best about music say so; and undoubtedly we have heard topical songs with a dash of lavender.

Colors crop out everywhere. When Goodrich brought forth Black Tread rubber, the color caught; and soon a lot of tires were singing in treads.

Of course it is quality, not color, that makes Goodrich treads outwear others.

The distinctive coloring of Silvertown Cord Tires, and their graceful modeling make them much sought by motorists to dress smart cars.

But Goodrich would make them ugly as an old shoe if ugliness would add another mile to their durability.
