At the Theaters

Do you like melodrama? The real old Drury Lane brand filled to the brim with stirring action, suspense and genuine thrills? Who doesn't? If you do, you should not fail to see "Sporting Life," Maurice Tourneur's superb picturization of the famous Drury Lane success of twenty years ago which will be shown at the Star Theatre tonight.

Just as in the days when the vivid melodrama thrilled young and old alike, the picturization of the more famous of these thrillers, is rousing popular interest to a high degree of intensity. When Mr. Tourneur began work on "Sporting Life" as his first offering as an independent producer, he gave orders that no expense should be spared to make the photo play a distinct work of art, and that his wisdom was appreciated on its presentation in a New York theatre on September 15, 1918, when it was acclaimed one of the best photoproductions made in years.

New actors, granting that they possessed the requisite histrionic talent, would have been qualified to play Daniel Esmond, William Farnum's role in the William Fox photoplay masterpiece, "The Broken Law." This stupendous feature has to do with the destiny of a gypsy lover, and necessarily calls for an artist skilled in romantic acting. That is not all, however, for it makes one other requirement—brawn.

Were not Farnum the physical culture enthusiast that he is, he would never have survived the fight scene in "The Broken Law." The play is cast in England in 1859 and the fight between Farnum, as Esmond, and Gaspar, who also aspires to be chief of the clan, is with bare fists, in accordance with the boxing rules then in force. And the fight is real—thrillingly real—in so far as the weight of the blows is concerned.

While Farnum's physical prowess is also called into play when he rescues his sweetheart from drowning, the photoplay makes its principal appeal thru its tender, underlying love story. It is Farnum's best vehicle since he has been a screen star, and it is one of William Fox's greatest achievements since he invaded the picture world. At the Liberty tonight.

DIVORCE SUIT FILED.

Alleging cruel and inhuman treatment among other things, Sallie M. Hawkins has launched a suit for divorce from Charles L. Hawkins in the office of the County Clerk.

The couple were married on December 21st 1918. The plaintiff asks $50 temporary alimony for three months, thirty dollars per month permanent alimony and $250 attorney fees. Horace M. Manning is Plaintiff's attorney.

SAY, JACK, LISTEN!

I was talking to Thad McHattan the other day, and he said everything was all right. "I ain't mad at nobody," says Thad as he looked over at K. Sugarman's new corner.

Say, Jack, listen, I want to tell you a funny snap. I was loafing around the Diamond T. & V. Co's store, fanning with the fellow that sweeps up, and there was a feller came in and asked the price of a 30x3 Diamond Tire, and the janitor told him $16.88. The price didn't faze him a bit, but he acted kind o'dazed—like a feller with about a dollar and four bits worth in his system—"Just give me one," said he, and one was pulled out of the rack, "Bring your car around and we will put it on for you," said the man.

"I ain't got no car," said the customer.

"Well, what in thunder do you want with a tire?" asked the man back of the cash register. The customer looked kind o'peevish, but said: "I'll tell you how it is. My baby's cutting teeth, and last night the wife and I walked about four hundred miles each, trying to keep down a riot in the neighborhood. This morning the wife said that if I would get a little rubber ring to put in his mouth that it might stop the noise. Well, I saw the width and depth of the cavity from which the noise came last night, and I realize that no "little" rubber ring would answer, and when I saw those tires sticking up there I knew I had found what I wanted. I'll be in tomorrow after another if he wears this one out tonight."

I always knew that when a man was wearing Diamond Tires on his car he was usually in a very contented and peaceful frame of mind but I never thought of using them to keep peace in the family after bedtime. All the wise ones use them, and them that ain't so wise are learning fast... You can't overcome ignorance all at once when it's on a subject that the general public don't know a darn thing about. And talking about ignorance, I just heard about a young fellow that wrote back from the country where he's doing duty for Uncle Sam and he was telling about the ignorance of that outfit regarding religious matters. "Why," he said, "they don't know whether Christ was crucified or run over a Ford." And I claim that's some ignorant.—BUD.
