FAMOUS BAY CITY BARS ARE HUMILIATED

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal. May 22.—The Palace bar turned into a soda water and ice cream parlor. Gosh! To men who are reaching the sunset days of their lives, who were a part of the hectic period of the Comstock mining boom and other famous bay area days in the various sections of the unfettered West with its open gambling and many famous bars and hotels it becomes an effort to see the animation to picture the transition which will occur this fall.

But the Palace Hotel bar will make the change it has had been announced. The largest and most famous of the far western hotels of that character, whose use is now said to have been in the neighborhood of $1,500,000 a year, where men discussed millions over their cocktails or highballs and where many a gigantic mining, land or stock deal was consummated, will fall in line behind this bar hangs Maxfield's Parrish's mural decoration "The Pled Piper of Hamelin" which cost the hotel management $25,000. A companion piece, "Old King Cole" hangs in the knickerbocker hotel in New York.

The Luckbar, rebuilt since the earthquake and fire of 1906 is associated with the early days of the city and about the name cluster many of the associations of the vigilantes who put an end to gambling and lawlessness in San Francisco.

The same line is being run by Klammath saloons, the section of which was opened in 1912. The year 1912, it is the inauguration of the leaders of San Francisco of that time.

In Klammath is the Klammath bar, a was the scene of many a riot of riot and drunken excitement which tried to rule in from the city at Klammath and filling themselves with sparkling wine, were prone to remember their mounts by planting bottles of champagne about the throats of their horses. Truly it was that Lord Shilley Douglas was one of the early blades.

With the passage of the liquor trade will go Jack Doyle's place at Vernon known to all followers of the prize ring and whose name is still held by bartenders across the country. Here in their heady hours, passed the day of the Klammath saloons, Elmer, Ed McCas, Jimmie, Young, Parker, McCarver, and many other men famed in the history of the prize ring.

In Los Angeles, the club situated near the courthouse already had passed out its nickname of the "Dynamite Reef" was acquired not in account of any high favorite meeting place for many of those connected with the trial of those concerned in the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times building.

Other saloons of Los Angeles around which memories of various sort eling were "Dead Bar", known to police and newspapermen; the Pantheon, the heart of Chinatown near which more than a score of Chinese were lynched by a mob more than a quarter of a century ago; and the "Bucket of Blood," a name to be found in many western cities.

Texas, already dry, even now only has memories of the Coctus, the Parlor, Wigwam, Gem, The Ranch, the Ruby, Astor House, Palace, Coney Island and Lobby, names which will endure in books of fact and fiction which have been written about the early days when bands of recreation seeking cow punchers galloped down the streets to a fusillade of pistol shots and rode their ponies up to the bars.

Billy Duncan's Silver Dollar Saloon, in Denver, which got its name from the silver dollars cemented into the floor, Tortoni's which went Duncan several better and made a fortune of twenty dollar gold pieces have gone, for Colorado anticipated national prohibition.

Everywhere it is the same, and while many mourn the passing of the famous resorts, all are preparing for the transition.

HUGE JOB FOR RED CROSS IN TURKISH LANDS

CONSTANTINOPLE, (By Mail)—American, British, French and Greek physicians are striving with might and main to prevent an outbreak of the plague in the region extending along the north shore of the Aegean Sea from Saloniki to Constantinople. In this work the British, French and Greek armies and the American Red Cross are co-operating.

"America and England as well as the far off corners of the earth cannot afford in these days to ignore outbreaks of disease no matter where they occur," declared a British sanitary officer in charge of the work of cleaning up Constantinople. "If the plague is allowed to breed here in the Near East sooner or later it will reach England and America. And its ravages if allowed to spread will exceed those of the so-called influenza."

Eastern Macedonia which has been a battleground for centuries and which since 1912 has been fought over again and again is today a horrible mess. The early summer sun is scorching the and mosquitoes by the millions, the unhealthy Struma Valley is steaming with malarial vapors, the streets of Thama, Serrus, Kavalla, Naussar and the hundreds of other small villages are filthy beyond belief.

The refugees live in shell-shattered ruins under sanitary conditions unobtainable. Their rags are alive with vermin. From the big Red Cross warehouse at Kavalla housing three hundred families of refugees are injected in thousands of cases from five to a dozen dead typhus were removed daily last month. The refugees were easy victims after many months of starvation in Bulgaria.

The children of European Macedonia are pitiful sights, suffering the results of semi-starvation. Their little ribs showing clearly, their thin drawn flesh. With hollow, lustreless eyes they look at the streets in the sun and wonder at their fate.

Each day tens of thousands of boxes of bread are distributed by the Red Cross by means of Serbian, Macedonian and Bulgarian sales of dollars and pounds to the neediest. Serbians and Greeks are injected in thousands of cases from five to a dozen dead typhus were removed daily last month. The
