LANE STANDS BY CONTRACT WITH COMPANY

planator and apologized for the omission, but no acknowledgment has ever been received by the Reclamation Service from Mr. Bradbury.

Taking up the 15 questions, the secretary states that the following features are charged to the power account: Kono Canal, McCormick Power site, Leavitt power site and South branch power plant; total expenditure, $126,900, none of which is charged to the irrigable lands of the Project.

(2) The district is not liable for expenditures in connection with any power incident.

(3) Individual water users are not entitled to any credit on account of power, since the power charge is not against the land.

(4) The recommendations of the local Board of Review could not be followed as it would cause a large loss to the Klamath Project. (The recommendation referred to fixed the cost at $50, without power canals or power sites, which should remain in the government and if possible be developed for commercial purposes; the proceeds to go to the Reclamation Service to recoup in part the loss likely to occur.)

(5) Power features have not been segregated from costs of Project. The money expended on this account may be repaid by sale of power canals and sites. If not must be loss to reclamation fund.

(6) Expenditures for power are not chargeable to canals. Management of canals may be turned over to district at any time that seems desirable. The title to the canals and other property cannot be turned over until further authorization of Congress.

(7) Any proceeds of sale of property acquired for the project will be credited thereto, but the liability mentioned in contract with district will not be decreased, as that was based on irrigable lands, because any reduction of that amount would mean loss to fund.

(8) Absolute ownership of canals by the district must be determined by Congress. Management of system with sufficient water to irrigate lands may be turned over to water users under law.

(9) Sum specified in contract of July 6, 1918, represents total liability of district to government; will not be changed without further contract.

(10) District will not be liable for greater amount than that specified in contract of July 6, 1918.

(11) States in substance that under the July contract the Water Users' Association is released from the obligations assumed by contract of 1895.

(12) District unquestionably is bound by all provisions of contract of July 6, 1918. The voting of the water users was advisory; directors of district had full power to execute contract following in general terms the form voted on. (By this the Secretary seeks to hold District to the terms of the provision slipped into contract by directors, surrendering rights to power, power possibilities, rights in Ankeny canal, cost of additional drainage and replacement of perishable structures.)

(13) The $6 per acre added to land brought into district is mandatory under law, which provides that five per cent per annum shall be added to lands coming in after one year. No credit will be given for this charge. The matter does not seem to be important.

(14) There is apparently no way district can be made liable for damages because of construction of dam.

District is in no way party to contract. (15) No arrangements have been made to give District first privilege of purchasing power possibilities incident to Project for amount actually expended by government.

OUR BOYS

Down to the sounding sea, And over the rolling wave, Went forth the sons of the mighty West. The stricken lands to save, No coward's voice was heard to chide, No craven sought to lag, As o'er the shell-torn fields of France They marched with the starry flag. No terrors of the Aronne wood, Nor mind of the noisome trench, Nor death, nor the shriek of bursting shell, Could the fire of their ardor quench, And they marched as Caesar's march- and soul with his legions went, O'er the salt-sown fields of Gaul To smite the barbarous Hun. But the Marquis the French his noble soul, When the general said: "Were here? O, I am still here, Legion, under his spike," Trembled with sudden fear, For he saw before his hurried hoofs The Allied Vengees meet, And he knew that the gun from over the sea, Had never known defeat!

Such as heroes we welcome them To come to show to all In the War with wrong as in Ar-

RONNE. Their ranks with an awful will, Unshaken by honors bravely won, Their eyes shall never cease, The song that led in the hell of war Shall triumph on fields of Peace. O. C. Applegate
