(son) and other Lasts

that goes into a BUCKHECHT shoe. We call it an ideal. You don't see when you buy it's something tucked away but it's there, just the same.

this BUCKHECHT ideal—spirit that has animated this since its establishment in 1892. Simply this:

a shoe that looks well and is as good as it looks; a shoe that ought to fit and that meets your every expectation in every way.

BUCKHECHT Shoes for smart specimens, every one! Clean-cut, sensible styling; no frills or foppish about them. A man's shoe for a man's man. Dependable and dressy withal. As appeals to you!

what your shoe requires—remember this: from the street to everyday indoors—BUCKHECHT Shoe for every purse. Always look for the name when you buy. You'll find it on every shoe—for your protection!

HERE is good style for you—and everything else that belongs! Trim, trig and altogether effective—The Biltwell is a good example of good taste, good style and good workmanship combined. An English-last model with plenty of "swing" to it; and, in addition, that dependable service-quality you have come to expect in every BUCKHECHT Shoe.

The COMFORTER

WHILE it is true that every BUCKHECHT Shoe is designed with an eagle eye to comfort—the model here shown is especially notable in this respect. For foot-ease and foot-freedom—for sheer shoe satisfaction—permit us to commend The Comforter. A sturdy, sensible shoe that depends on sound materials and thorough workmanship for its unusual wearing qualities.

SNOW SIX FEET AT CRATER RIM

MEDFORD, Or., June 11.—E. A. Welch of Medford, C. J. Seymour, United States road engineer, and W. E. Helfrich of Portland, left Prospect Monday morning, May 26, and drove to within a half mile of the Crater Lake park line, from which point they walked to and from Crater Lake.

Snow at the park entrance was three feet deep and the same depth at White Horse. They followed the south bank of Castle creek to its source, then took a northeasterly course up the mountain to the summit of the ridge, where snow was six feet deep.

From that point they descended to the engineers' camp and found eight feet of snow. Near there they ran upon a bear, getting within 200 feet of it.

At half past 4 they arrived at the rim and obtained a wonderful view in all directions. The Klamath region lay before them particularly clear and beautiful, as was also Crater lake and mountains beyond. Snow at this point was six to nine feet deep, except in drifts, where it was deeper. On the north side of the building it was piled up to depth of 25 feet.

The hour was late and they were compelled to spend the night there, so they entered the lodge thru a second-story window, by means of a handy snowbank. Early Tuesday morning they were on the move, walked to their car below the park and reached Prospect at noon, tired, hungry, sunburned and happy, and arrived in Medford immensely pleased with the trip.

They comprised with the first party to reach Crater lake this year, and the earliest to reach it any year so far as there is any record.
