

At the Theatres

Coming with a widely heralded reputation as affording Dustin Farnum the most popularly accepted vehicle of his screen career, "A Man to Be Open" will be presented at the Liberty theatre tonight under the direction of United Picture Theatres, Inc.

Few modern romances have attained a larger popularity than Roger P. Pocock's novel on which the latest Farnum superpicture is based, and which it closely follows in story. The rapid action so essential to a great motion picture is easily forthcoming from the swiftly moving story of the novel, and in the photoplay version Appearing in one of the most remarkable picture productions ever seen in this city, Lina Cavalotti, the beautiful Paramount star, and world-famed diva, was seen in her splendid portrayal of the Duchess Gismonda in the photoplay, "Love's Conquest," which was presented with eminent success at the Star theatre yesterday. Not since "The Eternal Temptress," in which this famous star appeared, was displaced at this play house, has this charming actress been seen to such splendid advantage as in her portrayal of this arduous role, so filled with the romance of medieval times manners and customs. This picture will be repeated again tonight.

Added to the natural advantage of swift succession of event and change of scene possessed by the screen over the written word.

The story centres around one of Nature's gentlemen who is first a shipwrecked sailor, then a companion of cowboys and last a ranger, and portrays his adventures in the great Northwest. A fascinating love story is said to weave itself into the main thread of the story, which is reported to hold a surprise for the audience right up to the final scene.

The strong company presented in support of Mr. Farnum includes such well known leading women, Clara Du Prae, Joseph Dowling, Lamar Johnson and Herhall Mayell.

Rolling comedy burlesque is the keynote of "The Little White Savage," Carmel Myers' latest starring vehicle, which comes to the Temple theatre tonight. Miss Myers has the title role, and she fills it to perfection. For according to the star's mother, she has been a rambler from infancy, and this play simply gave her an opportunity to turn loose and be really natural. Frances Nimmo Greaves wrote the story and Wallace Young created the scenario from which Director Paul Powell evolved the comic photodrama. It represents the verbal dream of a circus proprietor who tells the editor of a country weekly a press agent story that makes all other publicity vamps listen like gospel. It will afford a delicious hour's entertainment, for laughter is its basic principle, and the situations are so ridiculously funny that they actually become serious, to use a paradox. The star's supporting cast includes Harry Hilliard, John Cook

William Dyer and Richard Cummings.

A vital caveman scene is one of the features of "Proposing Bill," the latest Capital Comedy of "Smiling Bill" parsons. You ought to see Bill deal in a couple of tiger skins, charging pretty Mary Melvor over, who packs with a club to drag her. In the most approved primitive wooer's fashion to his den. "And if you think it's easy running thru the scrub with bare feet and ankles I wish you'd try it just once," said the tortly caveman after the shot was photographed. At the Liberty tonight.
