

At the Theatres

MOVIES

Tonight will be the final presentation of Martin Johnson's great picture, "Captured by Cannibals". This is the second and final set of pictures of this explorer's thrilling adventures in the South Seas among the man eating tribes of fearful savages. The scenery in these pictures is unsurpassed and anyone who is interested in travel pictures cannot afford to miss "Captured by Cannibals".

An additional feature of an entirely different nature will also be shown with Clara Kimball Young as the star. She will be seen in "The Savage Instinct," pronounced one of the best Miss Young has appeared in.

That versatile young screen star, Bryant Washburn, has a human interest comedy in "The Way of a Man With a Maid," and the story originally appeared in "The Saturday Evening Post," where Bryant himself read it and set about securing screen rights. It is a Paramount picture and will be shown at the Star theatre today only.

It introduces Arthur McArney, a $21 dollar a week clerk, as the chief figure, and shows his romance with Elsa Owenson, an extravagant, little blonde stenographer. Arthur McArney is shown as a very ordinary young man, satisfied with his weekly wage until the expensive Elsa comes into his life. Then he has to hustle to show her a good time and from this situation the story develops to a charming and unexpected ending.

Bryant Washburn is said to be at his best as the young clerk. Wanda Hawley plays Elsa Owenson and Fred Goodwins, who has done excellent work in recent Paramount Pictures, appears as Bick Olsen. McArney's chum, Others who play important roles are Bessie Eyton, Clarence Gellert, Jay Dwiggin, Billy Elmer and James Neill.

PHOTOGRAPHERS WILL FILM ISLANDS SOUTH OF MAYLAY.

Sumatra, Borneo, Java and other islands south of the Maylay Peninsula will be filmed from every possible angle within the next two months, if the plans of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company are carried out. Photographers left on July 10 on the "Empress of Asia" bound for Singapore.

Thousands of feet of film will be taken of the rubber industry, the entire process of coffee making in Java will be filmed, and many tropical scenes will be caught by the camera for the first time. The photographers plan to remain over a year if necessary, to secure the many educational views which they hope to be able to present to the American people.

BILL BROWN IS BACK TO FISH

An Eyesore That has for Years Held up the Development of Fairview Section is to be Removed

"Gosh! man, what have you people been doing here?" was the way W. K. Brown put it up to a Herald man yesterday when he met him on the street for the first time in ten years.

There are thousands now here who do not know who "Bill" Brown is, but at one time he was by far the biggest factor in the affairs of Klamath county that it ever had. With his partner, C. W. Hawkins, under the firm name of Brown & Hawkins, he came here for the purpose of placing the Klamath Valley under a comprehensive irrigation system. They were the forerunners of the Reclamation Service, that iridescent dream that was to do so much and accomplished so little for Klamath county. When this firm came here it offered, and in a large number of cases had contracted, to place the water on the land for $1.25 an acre per year. Mr. Brown, who is one of the ablest engineers on the coast, laid out the system, and started work on a tunnel from the Upper Lake, which if it had been completed by the Reclamation Service would have brought under irrigation several thousand acres that are today above the present main canal.

After the work had progressed to a considerable degree and the firm had expended upwards of $200,000, the Reclamation Service appeared on the scene. The tocsin was sounded and the farmers were gathered from the four corners of the county and were told that if their good and grand old Uncle Samuel were permitted to come in here he would put the water on their land for not to exceed $20 an acre, and they would have ten years in which to pay back the money without interest; that the maintenance charge would not exceed 25 cents an acre; that he would reclaim 250,000 acres of land and make the marsh land that surrounded the city bloom and blossom until it would support a great population, and—well they sold them the brick. Some of the enthusiasts were ready to hang Brown and Hawkins because they didn't take to the woods and let the Reclamation have all of their rights and interests for nothing. In the meantime Brown and Hawkins offered to build the system and sell it to the people for $15 an acre, but they could not hear anything but the siren call of the government officials. Finally an agreement was reached whereby the Reclamation Service acquired their rights and they shook the dust of Klamath county from off their feet.

Since winding up their affairs, which was about ten years ago, they have confined their operations to California. Mr. Brown is accompanied by Mr. Hawkins, both having pitched their tent on the banks of Spring Creek, where they are going to try for the next few weeks to recover from the scorching heat that has been burning up the Sacramento Valley. Continuing his exclamation, Mr. Brown said:

"I have kept more or less in touch with Klamath Falls during the years that have passed, but I had no idea that the development had been so pronounced. I am amazed at the mills and box factories that have been built here, indicative of the solid foundation upon which the city rests. You see no evidence of the boom, which is another sign that sanity and good business sense is governing development."

"I am glad to get back, if even for only a few days. I always like Klamath and its people and I hope to make this the beginning of an annual visit to what I believe to be one of the best sections on the Pacific Coast."
