

OLD MAN APPROACHES METHUSALAH IN AGE

LOUISVILLE, July 29.—The National Geographic Society has been asked to investigate the claim of John Shell, a mountaineer of Leslie County, Ky., that he is 153 years old. Shell's neighbors corroborate the statement concerning his age. Shell has nine children. He says the oldest is ninety years old. He is said to have 200 descendants in his home section, several being great grand-children. The mountaineer, who claims excellent eyesight, steady nerve, and general good health attributes his long life to outdoor living and temperate habits.

WASHINGTON RESTAURANTS WILL SERVE WILD GAME

SEATTLE, Washington, July 29.—It now is lawful in the state of Washington, under a law passed by the recent legislature, to raise for sale and serve at public meals various kinds of wild game. Raising of wild birds or animals and the serving of them at restaurants is under state license, a fee of $10 for the first year being charged and $5 annually thereafter. Thus, for the first time in the state, the fastidious diner may eat fried China pheasant or roast duck or venison—provided persons are found who see a profit in raising the wild game for such purposes.

LUMBER CAPITAL IN FIVE YEARS

That Is What Harry Holgate Says He Was Told Is to Be the Fate of Klamath Falls, Which Means It Is to Be a Great City.

You know Harry Holgate, don't you? Well, he's in town. Here for the purpose of looking into some of the legal kinks that are always arising since this county was cursed by the rule of the reclamation service. A peculiar thing about Holgate is the fact that he belongs to the reclamation service, and at the same time is white clear through. Occasionally such things happen, and Holgate seems to be one of the "occasionals." It is now a matter of a year or more since he was here, and since he was once a bona fide resident of this city, and before he fell from grace and went to work for the government, so he is a pretty good judge of what this city was, is, and will be, both by way of personal experience and comparison, for he is on the go all the time. So, just listen to this:

"Do you know that Klamath Falls is to be the pine lumber capital of the world—yes, 'world'—within five years? It's a fact, and I have it on the authority of two of the biggest lumber operators on the coast, neither of whom has a dollar invested in here, and who are unlikely to have. But it is the old story over again—you have to go away from home to hear the news."

"I was riding in the smoking section of the Pullman on my way here, and heard two chaps talking about the lumbering industry in general, and many times they referred to Klamath Falls. This naturally aroused my curiosity, and I butted into the talk. What I heard made my hair stand on end. These fellows told me things that were so big I did not have room for them under my hat, so you can better imagine than I can tell you what they said, and it was all about Klamath Falls. They told about mills, and railroads, and development, and all that, just as easy. So I pinched myself to see if I was really awake. Now you know why some of these peculiar real estate deals have been taking place in Klamath Falls. If I did not have a Horace Greeley farm near Portland, you can bet your last cent I'd be buying Klamath Falls property right now. You fellows are doing just what your predecessors did with the timber claims—sitting down and letting the outsider get the gravey.

"If you doubt that this city is growing, go away for a year and come back. Go out for a month and visit other places, and then come back, and if your blood does not course through your veins as a result of your excitement over Klamath Falls, then you must be a fish—one of those birds that the Klamathis salt down."

U. S. MERCHANTS WILL COMPETE FOR TRADE

COBLENZ, July 29.—Army headquarters permitted 5 American commercial travelers to proceed through the Coblenz bridgehead to the interior today. This will enable American firms to compete with the Europeans for the German trade.

Orders sending the third division of the American army home were given out today. They will begin en-training for Brest on August 5.

I. W. W. LEADER WILL SPEAK IN INTERESTS OF WORKERS.

LEAVENWORTH, July 28.—William D. Haywood, I. W. W. released pending appeal, plans to tour the country in the interests of the working men. He said that his organization has been grossly misrepresented and misjudged. He emphatically denied that they had opposed the war with Germany or resorted to violence, and stated that they had been the victims of a newspaper war.

Are You Going to Decorate for the Coming Elks Convention

This occasion offers us a splendid opportunity to advertise the progressiveness and fine spirit of the citizens of this city. Members of the Elks Lodge from all over the state will be here Convention Week, and it behooves us to extend them a full measure of hospitality and an enthusiastic welcome. Let us practically turn the Keys of the City over to them—and make a booster of every visitor.

Elaborate decorations for the downtown section have been planned, and every merchant and home-owner should show the "purple and white." While most orders for decorations have been placed far in advance, and leaves us but a small reserve, we urge, to avoid disappointment, the placing of your order at once.

We have the purple and white bunting and ribbon, and papiermache shields bearing "Welcome B.P.O.E"
